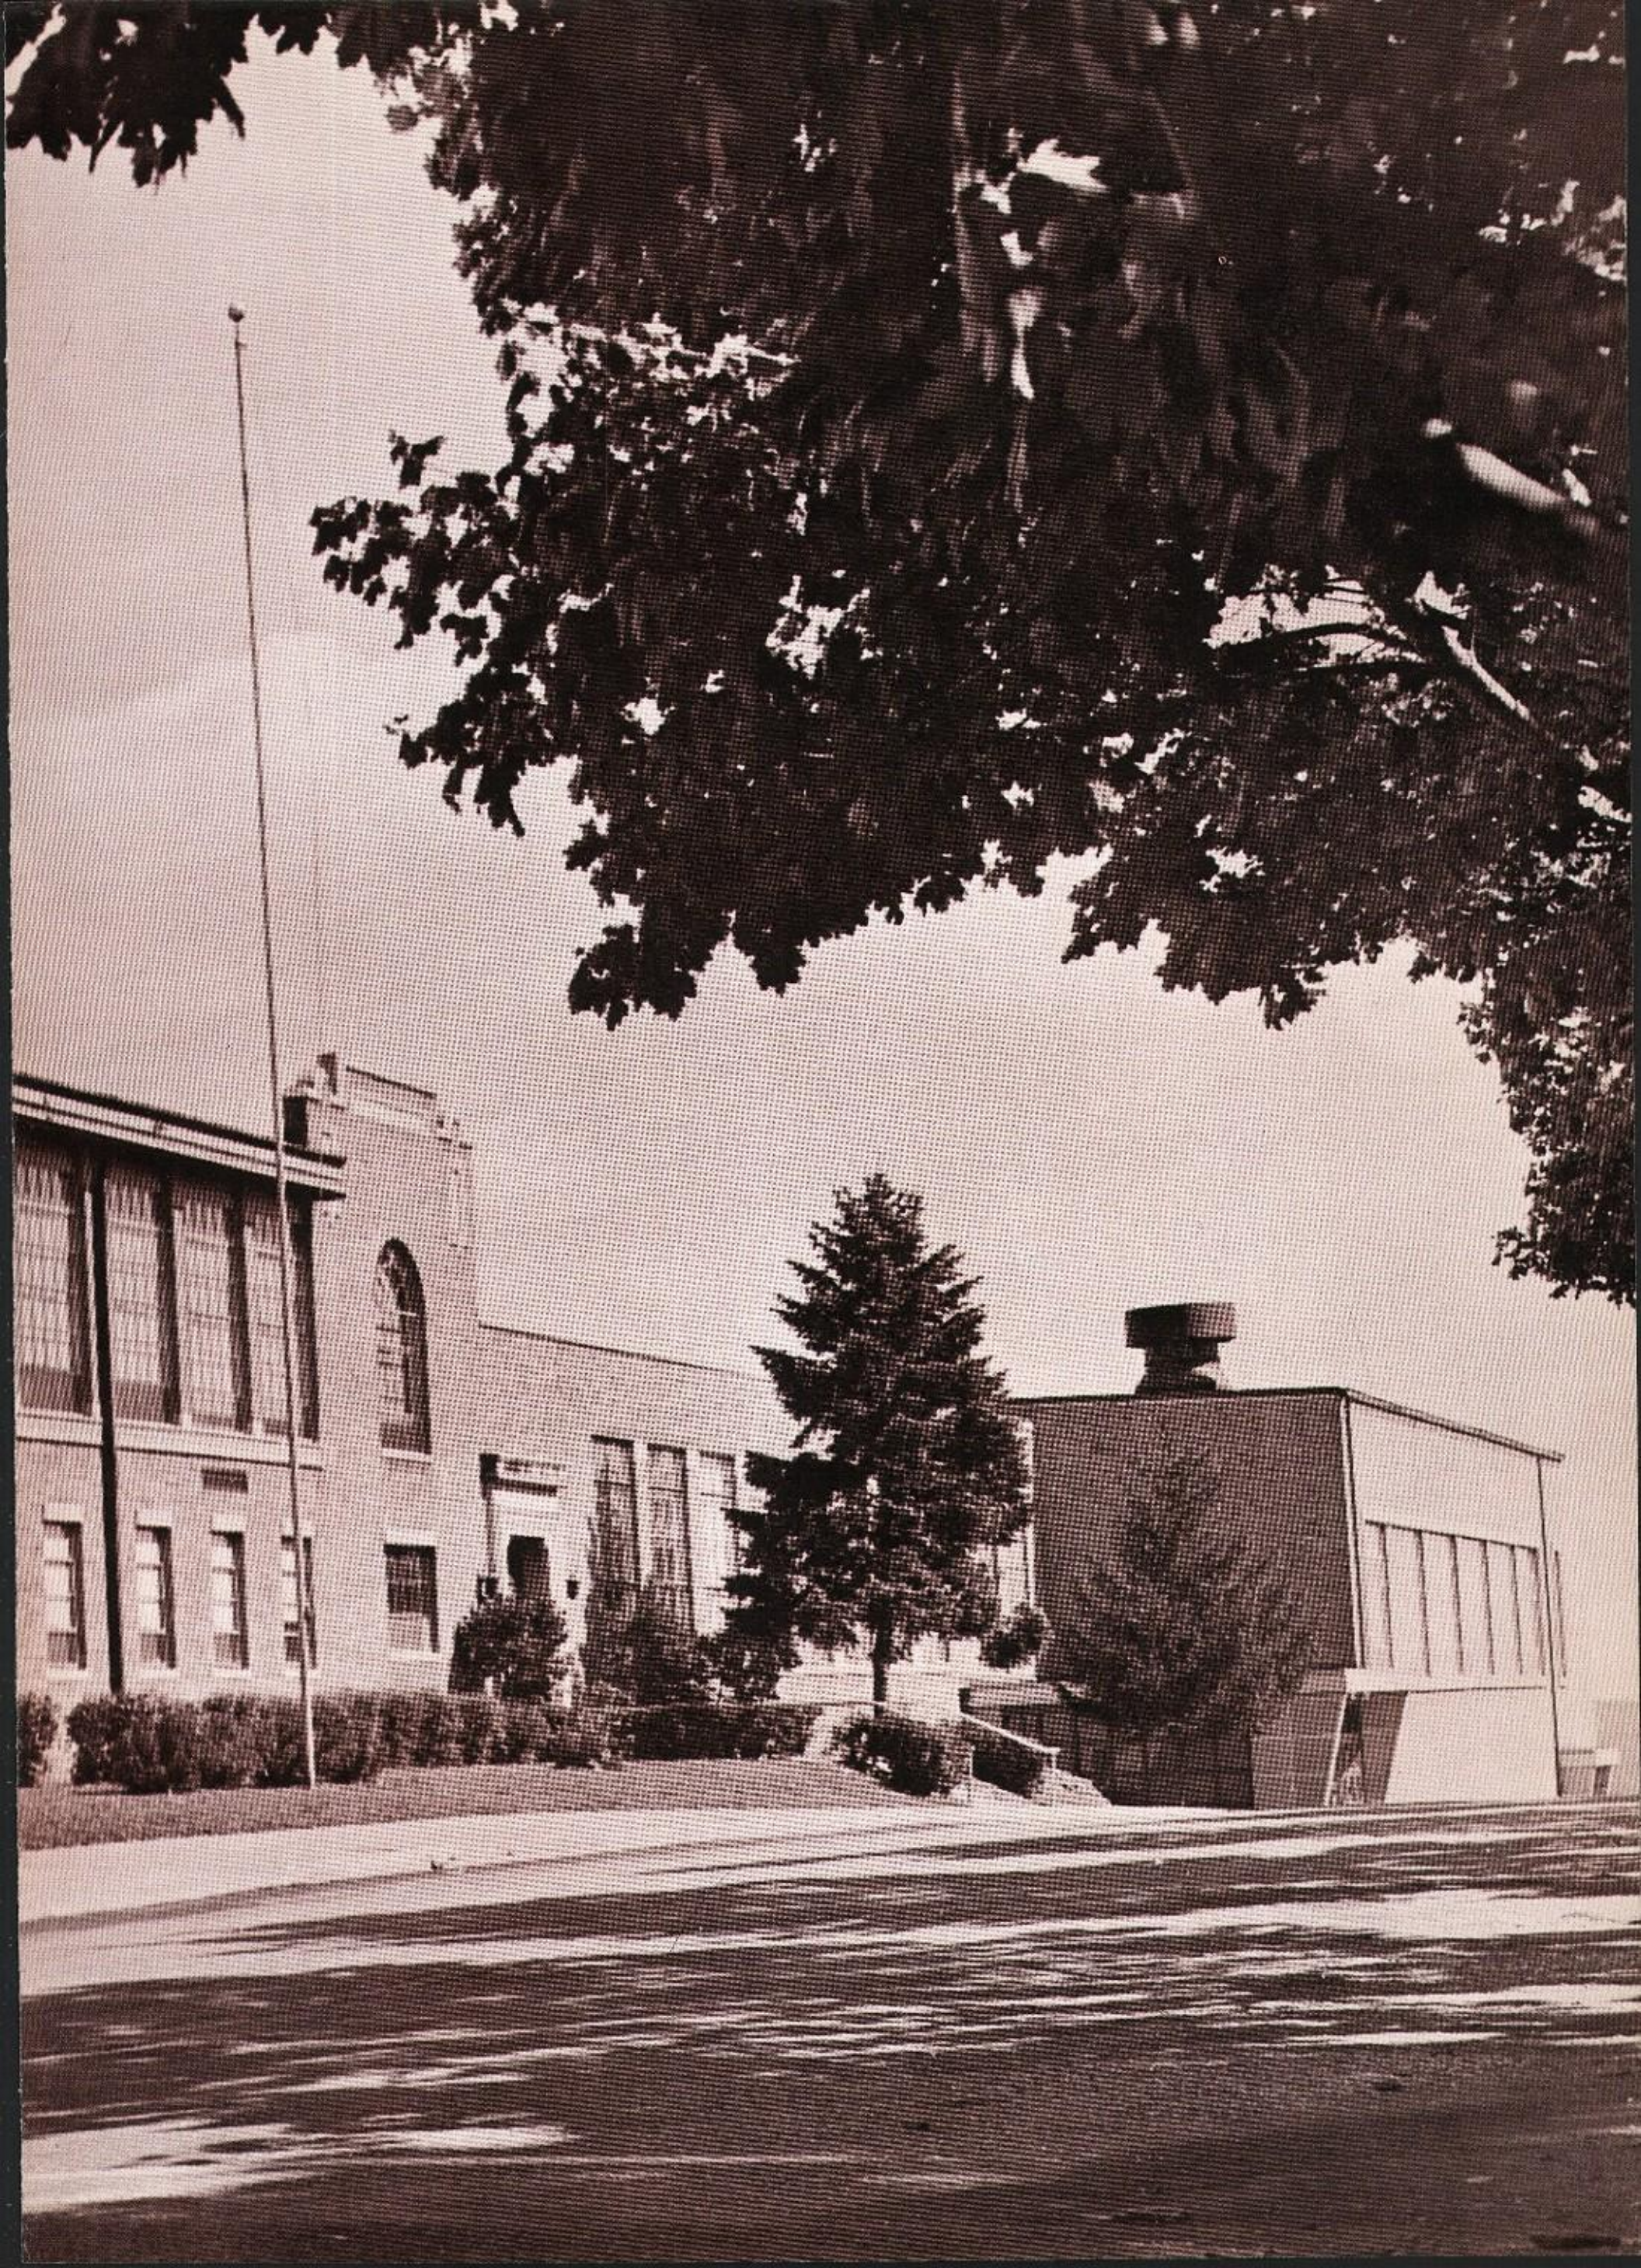
WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS

1958-59



FOREWORD

During our high school years, many things happen. Some are comical, some embarrassing, some unimportant, and some serious. Although they may seem trivial at the time, these things all go together to make our school years the best of our lives.

Because we have spent several happy years here in the school on the hill, the staff would like to acquaint you with the things that have made our high school tick. Getting an education is our main reason for coming to school, so we'll start right at the top, with the scourge of the loafers, the faculty . . . then the curriculum, the underclassmen, and the activities . . . finally, those busiest of mortals, the seniors. In short, we'll bring you the things that WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

ADMINISTRATION AND FACULTY

Helpful friends on the other side of the desk . . . to the students, this aptly describes our teachers and administrators. Different types—yes, for although they are in the same line of work, they all have their little idiosyncrasies and habits that make that work seem different. To those of us who spend hours in their classes, they seem to be experts in their fields, and should we find ourselves in a tough spot, they are always available for good advice.

The administration and faculty have provided us with both trials and counseling; they certainly are a part of high school that WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

Enjoying friendly chatter, with lots of coffee besides, these faculty members retreat to their "private dining room" in the science department, not only to enjoy their dinner but also to escape for a few relaxing minutes from the clamor of the busy cafeteria . . . Miss Myers, Mr. Maddox, Mrs. Ehrhart, Mrs. Jackowick.

Mr. Dan B. Kulp, A. B., M. A. . . . Our supervising principal, Mr. Kulp, is especially busy now with plans for the new school. This may even affect his fishing expeditions, which are his main recreational interest. Perhaps out on the bank of a good bass stream, Mr. Kulp learns the patience that is so useful in dealing with reluctant scholars. He also enjoys traveling, and participates in many civic affairs. Mr. Kulp is in charge of all the schools in the area, and keeps quite busy with these many duties.

Headquarters of the school

The Operating Committee for the Red Lion Area Schools meets in its regular first-Thursday-of-the-month session. Front: Ethan Harrold, J. Edwin Johnson, Gerald Zarfos, Robert Graham, Purl Barnett. Back: Fred P. Sample, Arden Blaine, Quentin Downs, Donald Snyder, Dr. Woodrow Dellinger, Dan B. Kulp, Ralph Downs, Carl E. Seitz, Luther Grim, Harry Lohss, Roy McCliment, Woodrow Mellinger. Other members of the Board of Education are Theodore Wallace, Stewart Grim, Joseph Pomraning, Ralph Myers, Harold Good, Paul W. Heim, Richard Tyson, Charles Sentz, J. Emory McGurk, Luther Pomraning, Gene O. Strayer, Zeno Neuhaus, Kenneth Bankert, Stanley Lentz, Marvin E. Strayer, Penrose Heindel, Dr. Grover Artman, Lester Craley, Quinton R. Ellis, Charles Mellinger, Moran H. Koons, Carl E. Smith, Harry Stump, Walter Shue, Lester C. Hess, William G. Enfield, Marlin M. Mundis, Gerald Mitzel, and Homer Gembe.

Mr. Frederick Sample, A. B., M. Ed. . . . Now serving in his second year as principal is our former math teacher, Mr. Sample. His is the job of seeing that things run well in the high school. He is active in civic organizations and is frequently called upon to exercise one of his special interests, public speaking. Though he participates in most sports, his favorite is golf (he starred in the faculty-student game). In contrast to this affection for athletics, Mr. Sample also enjoys studying.

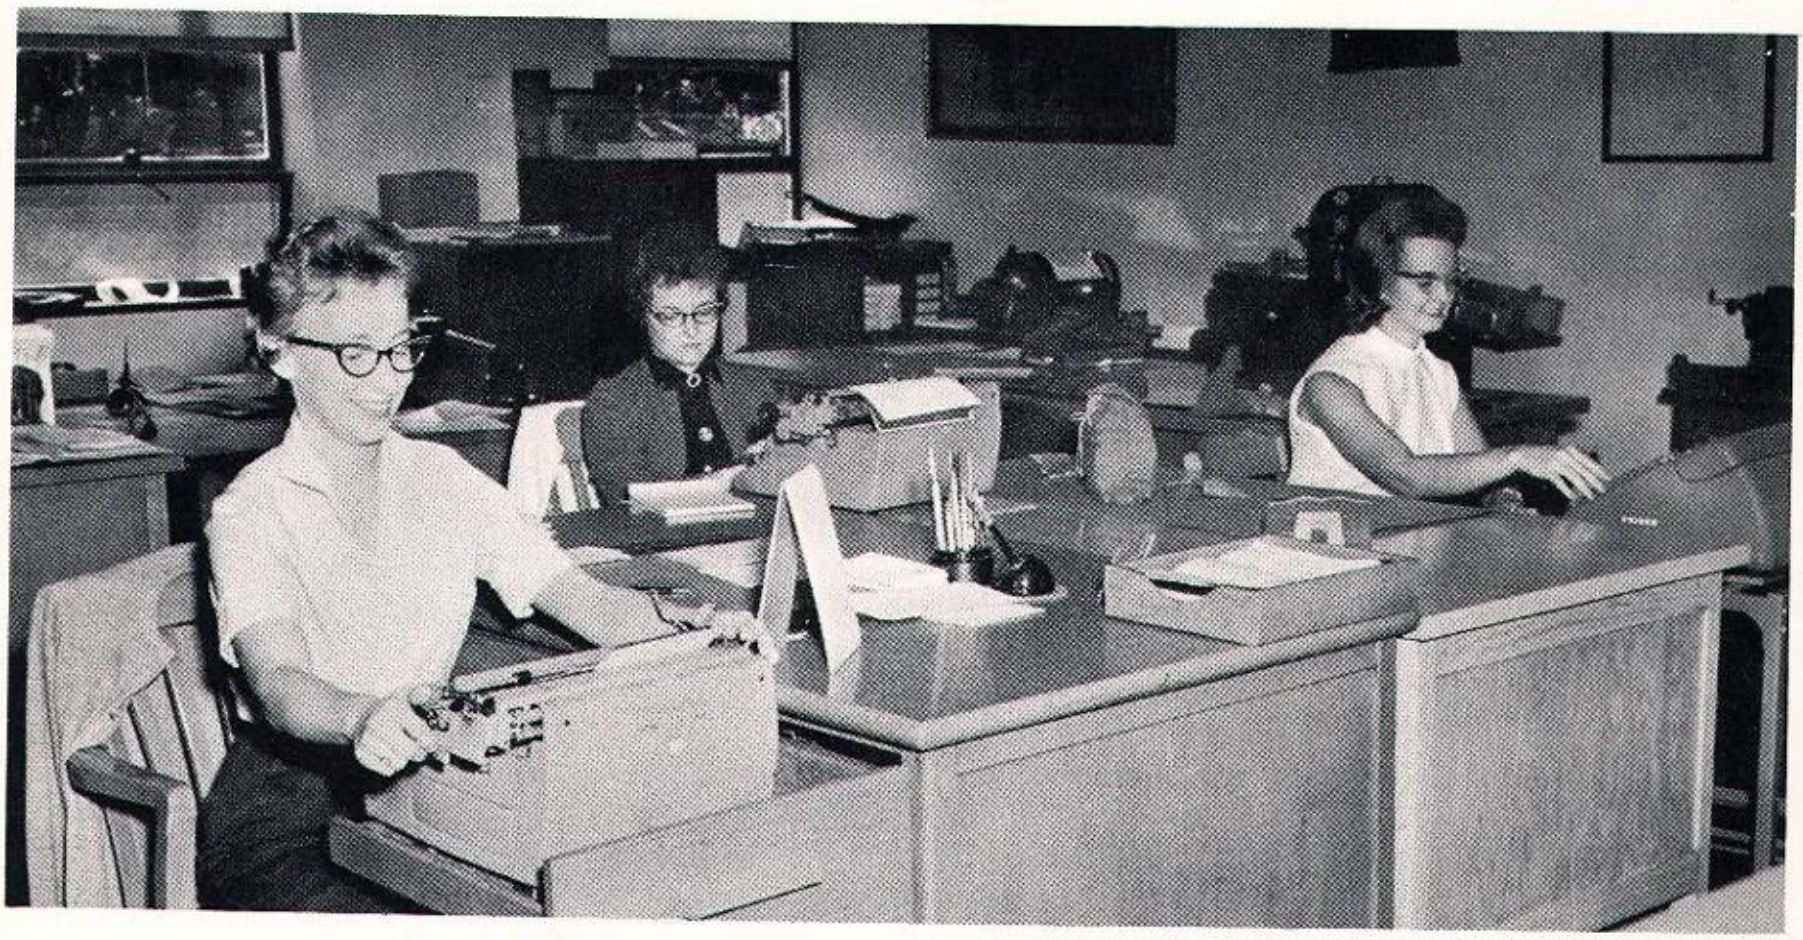
Mr. Martin F. Miller, A. B. . . . Home and School Visitor . . . greatly interested in language study, music, and theoretical math, but claims Lionel Model Railroads as his hobby.

Mr. Robert Tshop, B. S. . . . Administrative Assistant . . . sports, reading and church work rate tops for his leisure time.



The feminine touch in the office, our secretaries. Mrs. Beryl Baker is secretary to Mr. Sample; Donna Waltermyer specializes in tasks coming from the guidance offices; Mrs. Nancy Brown sandwiches cafeteria accounts into her stacks of tests to be typed and mimeographed for the teachers.

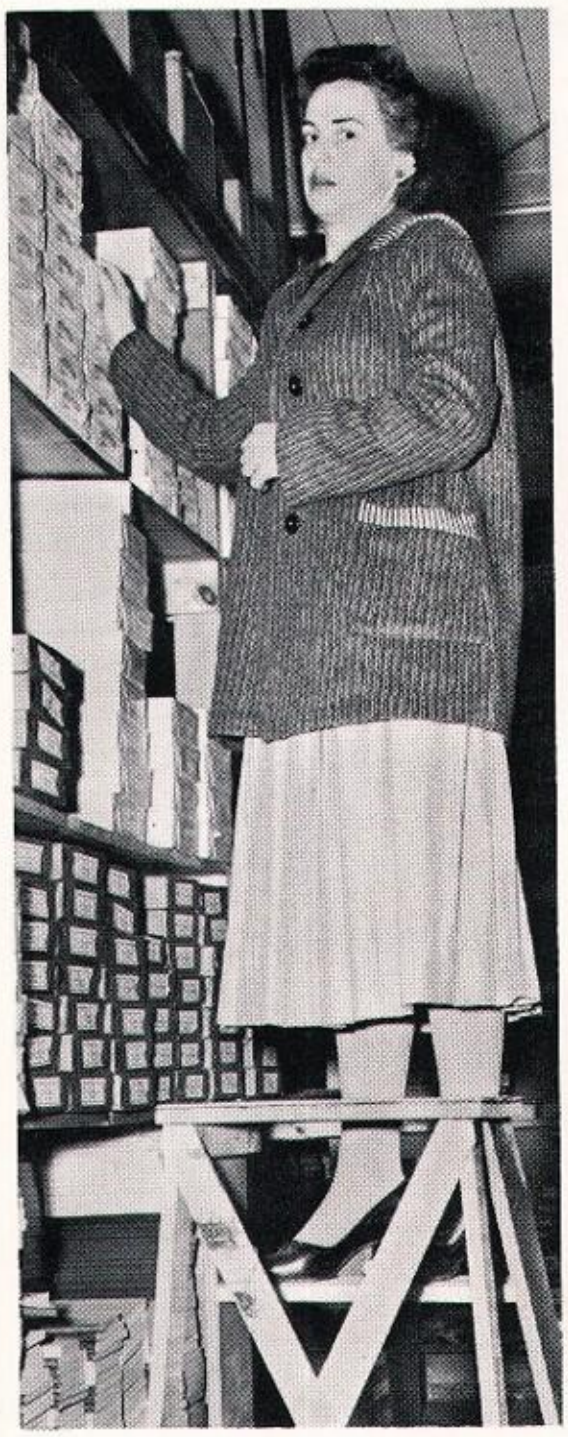
Mrs. Edna Sheckart, B. S. . . . Guidance Director . . . Assemblies, Prom, Social Activities . . . can be happy anywhere there's swimming, hunting, or fishing.

Mr. Theodore Sheckart, B. S., M. S. . . . Guidance Director . . . Assemblies, Class Day, Social Activities . . . enjoyed a summer vacation trip to Florida with his family.

Mrs. Carol Starkey, D. H. . . . Dental Hygienist . . . has outside interests in sewing and knitting.

Mrs. Louise D. Strayer, R. N. . . . School Nurse . . . Future Nurses Club . . . devotes her spare hours to reading.

Up in the air—Mrs. Trout, special secretary to Mr. Kulp. Hers is the job of distributing the much-needed supplies every Monday morning to waiting teachers.



Mr. Carl E. Seitz, secretary to the school board, holds forth in his little office adjoining the Hyson Room. Judging by his expression, it looks like the books are balancing.

Most students have been to the office at some time, supposedly for a good reason, and invariably they are conscious of the hum of activity.

The visitor may notice Mr. Sample busily signing excuses with the help of his secretary. Or maybe the offices of our guidance counselors catch his eye. A glance towards the supervising principal perhaps finds him at the phone, checking building details. In this busy suite of rooms, marked with the smell of mimeograph ink and the whir of typewriters, important decisions concerning our school are made. Though some students have had unhappy experiences here, it is generally thought of as a pleasant sort of place.

Mrs. Dorothy S. Adams, B. S. . . . English, Music . . . Senior High Chorus, Girls Chorus, Girls Ensemble, Night of Music, Commencement, Seventh Grade Advisor . . . her every day interests—gardening and reading; given the time, she travels.

Mr. John R. Beckley, A. B. . . . General Science, Mathematics . . . Senior Science Club, Ushers . . . fills his extra time with swimming, hunting, gardening, or fishing.

Mr. Richard H. Baldwin, A. B., M. Ed. . . . History . . . Assemblies, Dramatic Club, Junior and Senior Plays, Eighth Grade Advisor . . . enjoys golf, but his big interest is York Little Theatre.

Mrs. Dorothy S. Bowers, B. S., M. A. . . . Commercial Subjects . . . National Honor Society, Commencement . . . chose Canada as her vacationing and fishing spot last summer.

Daily the teachers have a task before them—helping to turn earnest young scholars into enlightened individuals. This may appear to be a job of some difficulty, but they are well equipped to handle it. Luckily so, for frequently they are faced with problems,

many of which arise because some young teen-ager just doesn't want to be enlightened; faculty members, however, are expert convincers. Too, they must be experts in research . . . keeping up with all the latest developments is absolutely essential, not only for their own satisfaction, but for right answers when some unusually eager student poses a "stumper."

Miss Helen E. Clevenger, A. B., M. A. . . . Latin . . . Lion . . . whose varied interests are as changeable as the weather, though she usually likes gardening.

Mrs. Dorothy Diehm, B. S. . . . Physical Education, Health . . . Majorettes . . . has traveled in twelve countries, including Germany, where she supervised a nursery-school.

Mrs. Aleta Ehrhart, B. S. . . . Commercial Subjects . . . Typing for Activities . . . patiently spends leisure hours knitting and crocheting.

Mr. Ronald Fitzkee, A. B. . . . Physical Education, Health . . . Football, Baseball, Varsity Club, Intramurals, Tumbling Club . . . a shutterbug as well as a sports enthusiast.

Miss Jeanette L. Espenshade, B. S. . . . Commercial Subjects . . . Football Programs, Junior Advisor, Prom . . . includes reading, sewing, traveling, and card playing in her preferred pastimes.

Mr. Clair A. Frits, B. S., M. Ed. . . . P. O. D., American History . . . Commencement, Junior Advisor, Ushers . . . has a prime interest in fishing.

Our faculty council, composed of one representative from each department, assembles monthly to hash over current school problems and plan future procedures. Present at this meeting are Mr. Nitchkey, Mr. Sample, Mrs. Bowers, Mr. Frits, Mr. Landis, Mr. Ziegler, Miss Keeports, Miss Clevenger, and Mr. Shaffer. Mrs. Shermeyer and Mr. Sheckart have since joined the group.

Mr. Paul I. Hangen, A. B. . . . Civics . . . Basketball, Tennis . . . whose zeal for bridge is topped only by his love of sports.

Mr. Daniel Heyne, B. S., M. Ed. . . . Geography, Science . . . Junior High Science Club, Junior High Football, Eighth Grade Advisor . . . fishing and coin collecting rate high in his hobbies.

Mrs. Hilda C. Jackowick, A. B., M. Ed. . . . English . . . Dramatic Club, Class Day . . . spent her summer vacation as counselor at Camp Weetamoe, New Hampshire.

Mr. Ervin Kopp, B. S. . . . Arithmetic . . . Ninth Grade Advisor, Publicity . . . highlighted his summer trip through the West by a visit to the Black Hills and Colorado Springs.

Miss Marie Keeports, A. B., M. A. . . . English . . . Hilltop, Journalism Club, Prom, Commencement . . . responds to just about any suggestion for travel—an English Conference at Penn State or a pleasure jaunt to New England.

Mr. John G. Krupka, A. B. . . . Mathematics . . . Tickets . . . an ardent fan of outdoor sports.

Miss Espenshade and her programs are a definite part of the scene at the Saturday afternoon football games. Apparently she has convinced Joe Lane that he'll enjoy the game more if informed.

Some old, some new, none borrowed, never—at least, hardly ever—blue . . . that's the faculty. There are in this group the pros of educating, who have given their time and patience to the tedious task of cramming young brains with everyday fundamentals of learning; on the other hand R. L. A. H. S. has a number of beginners. Each has his own interesting background,

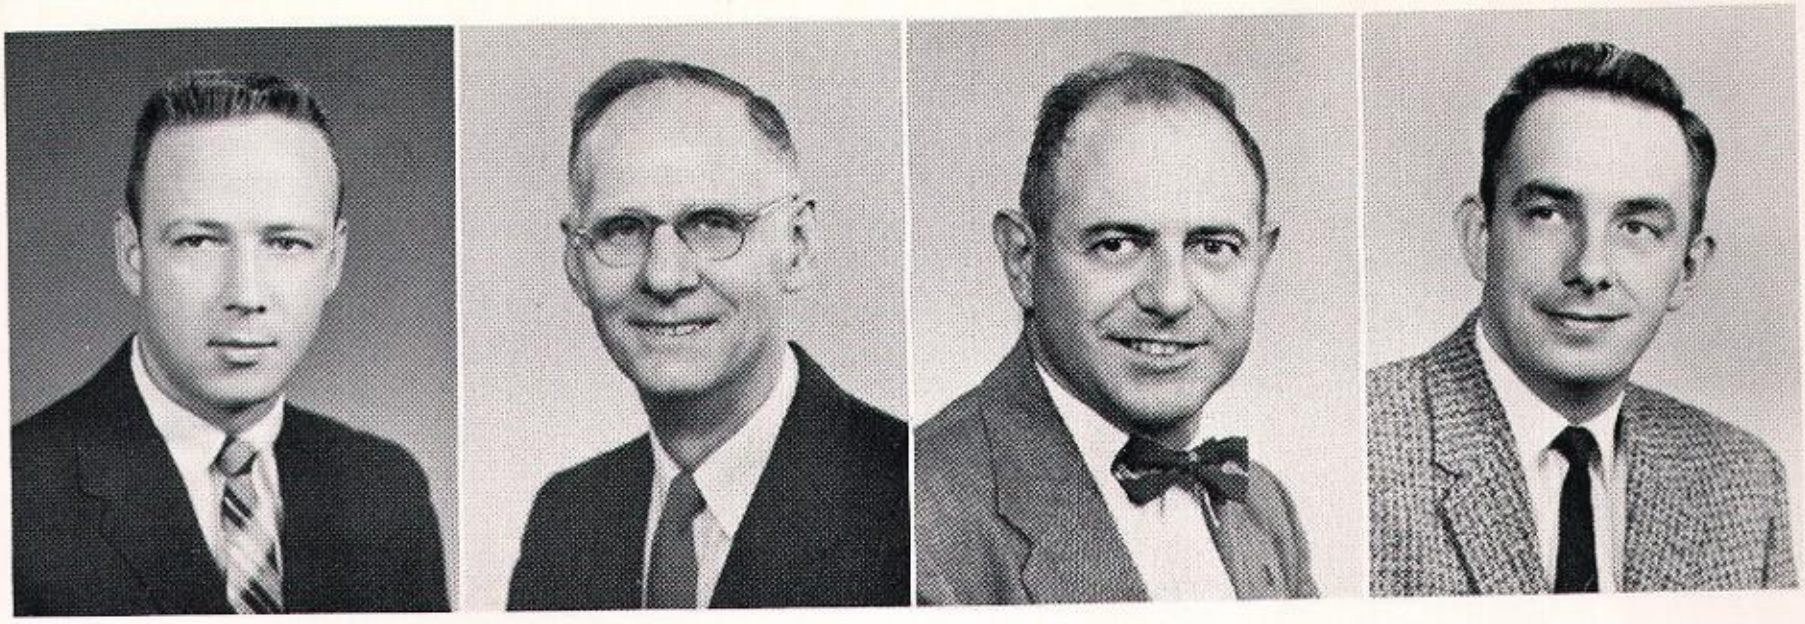
marked by a variety of degrees from a variety of colleges and universities. Any alumni of Red Lion on the faculty? Several. Others have come from as near as Dallastown or as far as other states. When it comes to teachers, Red Lion has a fine crew.

Mr. Dalton R. Landis, B. S. . . . Industrial Arts, Shop Mathematics . . . Stage Crew, Prom . . . utilizes his summers by working for an architect.

Mrs. Betty Laucks, B. S. . . . Home Economics . . . F. H. A., Costumes, Seventh Grade Advisor . . . greatly enjoys traveling with her family.

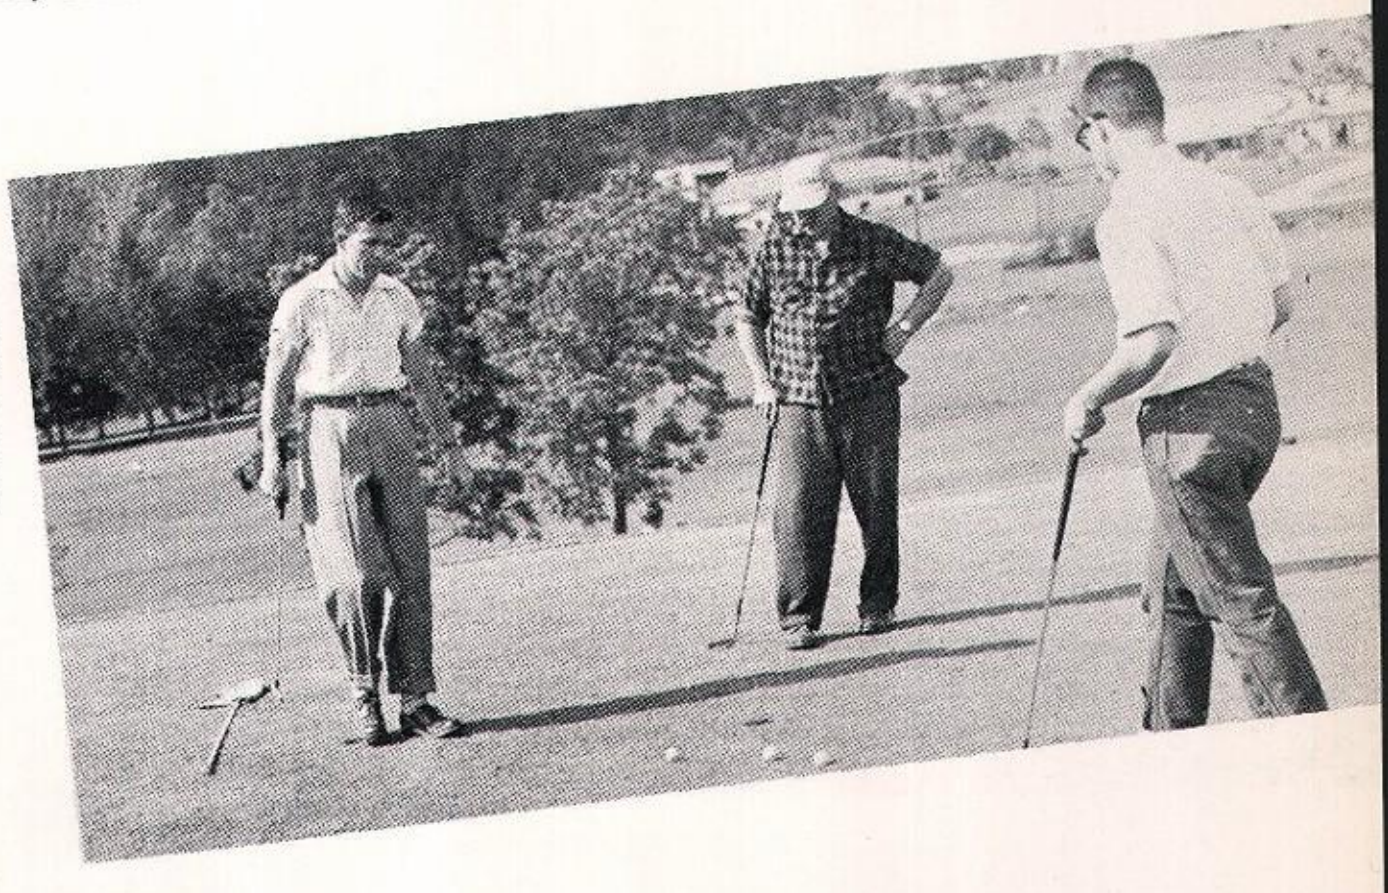


Mr. William Maddox, B. S. . . . Driver Education . . . Footţball, Junior High Basketball . . . sports, reading, and dancing are his favorite interests.

Mr. Harold M. Myers, B. S., M. Ed. . . . American and World History . . . Ushers . . . enjoyed a summer trip through New York; entertains himself in winter leisure with woodwork and reading.

Mr. Daniel E. Myers, A. B., M. A. . . . General Science . . . Junior High Science Club . . . electrical wiring is a main hobby of his.

Mr. John G. Myers, B. S. . . . Agriculture . . . F. F. A. . . . spent last summer by constructing a house for his family.



A lively day at the golf course . . . the annual faculty-student golf match seems to be going well for Mr. Sample, Mr. Nitchkey, and Dale Smith. In spite of the fact that Mr. Nitchkey was having one of his "better" days, the students brought home the bacon.

Miss Naomi M. Myers, B. S. . . . English . . . Assemblies, Ninth Grade Advisor, Social Activities . . . has three major free time interests—boating, reading, and tatting.

Mr. Charles R. Nitchkey, B. S., M. Ed. . . . Director of Athletics, Health, Physical Education . . . Student Council, Volleyball . . . reads and lectures on phases of the Civil War; in the summer directs Red Lion playground activities.

Miss Linda Nonemaker, B. S. . . . French, English . . . Junior Red Cross, Sophomore Advisor . . . is still hopeful of that trip to France.

Mr. Freeland E. Shaffer, B. S. . . . Physics, Chemistry . . . Photography Club, Lion, Senior Advisor, Class Day . . . spent his summer months in New York studying under a National Science Foundation Scholarship.

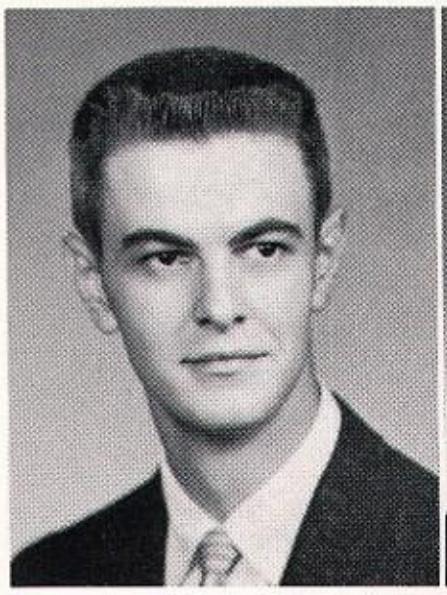
Mr. William E. Nyer, B. S. . . . English, Arithmetic . . . enjoys hunting, fishing, and antiques, but summer finds him busy with farming.

Mr. Dale Shellenberger, A. B. . . . English . . . Varsity Club, Football, J. V. Basketball, Track . . . was supervisor of Windsor Borough playground during the past summer; perhaps spotted some budding trackmen.

At long last, graduation . . . the faculty members seem to be congratulating themselves on a job well done as their former students file past to receive their diplomas.

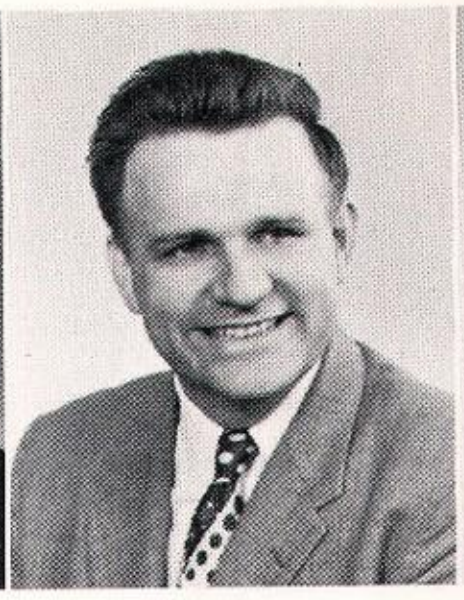
Mrs. Hilda K. Shermeyer, B. S. . . . Librarian . . . Library Club . . . looks forward to those fishing trips in Canada.

Mr. N. Eugene Shoemaker, B. S., M. Ed. . . . Biology . . . Biology Club, Sophomore Advisor . . . has worked with the Department of Agriculture in production of new varieties of grains and hybrid corn.



Mr. J. Robert Stover, B. S. . . . Mathematics . . . Tickets . . . for indoor leisure, chooses reading; for outdoor, swimming and ice skating.

Mrs. Janet R. Swartz, B. S. . . . Art . . . Decorations, Prom, Art Exhibit . . . included in her summer activities a ceramic course at Benderson in York.



Mr. Charles W. Tome, Jr., B. S.. . . . Civics, English, World History . . . Senior Advisor . . . in his off-duty hours, piano playing and church work.

Mrs. Florence Uhler, B. S. . . . Home Economics . . . Cafeteria Supervisor . . . Costumes . . . enjoys, and is quite skilled in, just about any form of craftwork.

Even teachers find that school days can be routine. Like the students, they may wish that they could take their fishing poles and pass a lazy afternoon by a cool lake or spend the day shopping or just relaxing at home. They can't leave their work, but on weekends and vacations you can find them doing anything from knitting socks to digging for worms at sunrise. All sorts of outside interests

are indulged in by the faculty. After a day of drilling formulas or verbs into a group of sometimes sleepy students, nothing can be as rewarding as an interesting sideline.

Was Miss Myers surprised when fruit came rolling up the aisle! The freshmen of 207 were treating her to an old-fashioned fruit roll. A portion of the loot was later packed for a hospitalized classmate.

Mr. George A. Ward, B. S., M. Ed. . . . Music . . . Band, Orchestra, Night of Music, Commencement, Dance Band . . . prefers swimming to any other pastime except violin playing.

Mr. Ward S. Yorks, B. S., M. Ed. . . . Industrial Arts . . . School Printing . . . for his summer, a trip to Canada for an N. E. A. Convention, a three-day visit at the Henry Ford Museum in Detroit, and school in Wisconsin.

Mrs. Anita G. Zarfos, B. S. . . . Physical Education, Health . . . Cheerleading, Dancing Club, G. A. A., Tumbling Club . . . usually spends vacation coaching at the West Reading Swimming Pool.

Mr. David S. Ziegler, A. B. . . . Algebra I, Plane Geometry . . . Basketball . . . to whom sports come first, second and last.

A look at the out-of-the-classroom

Mr. Myers greets all comers as he steps out of his role as history teacher to take tickets at our home football games.

Sharing one of their last lunches before Miss Mitchell's departure from R. L. A. H. S., Mrs. Uhler, Mrs. Zarfos, and Miss Clevenger chat happily in the quiet of the home ec room.

Second semester brought some changes in the faculty roster. Leo Sevastio, A. B., returned from his two year hitch with the army to resume teaching duties in the field of English. Mrs. Ernestine M. J. Smith, A. B., is filling a vacancy left in the Physical Education Department by Mrs. Zarfos' resignation. In the office, Mrs. Pauline Baerreis, as Mr. Sample's secretary, has taken over the desk which was formerly Mrs. Baker's.

side of our mentors.

Miss Nonemaker apparently is concentrating on making her hot dog crisp and crunchy as she inspects it at a French class outing at Mt. Pisgah.

Mr. Landis is one of those lucky people who like their jobs so well they make a sideline out of them. The camera caught him at a favorite spot—in front of a drafting board.

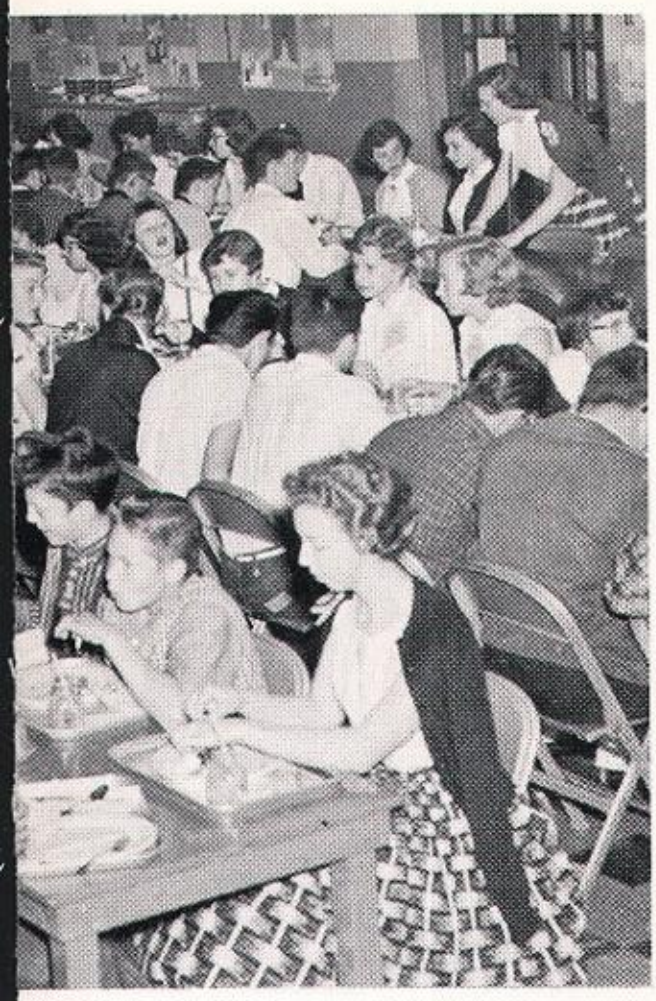
Students and faculty act alike when it comes to food. Both find that as noon approaches they are bothered by hunger pangs. It is so easy to imagine all the busy activities going on in the kitchen from the banging of pots and pans. Delicious odors steal slowly through the halls whenever one of the cooks quite accidentally happens to open one of the doors. From every group of hungry-eyed inmates clustered around the menu you can hear the familiar

"What's for dinner?"

The question is rewarded with a variety of answers. Joy is especially manifested at Thanksgiving and Christmas when it's turkey time. However, satisfying meals are served every day. So, a vote of thanks and credit to the members of the kitchen staff for their fast service and culinary talent.

Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Smeltzer, part of the cafeteria line-up, keep the platters coming as the noontime rush begins.

Mrs. Gladys Smeltzer, Mrs. Effie Kunkle, Mrs. Grace Smith, Mrs. Agnes Kunkle, Mrs. Ida Stabley, and Mrs. Alma Smith . . . these are the ladies who spend long hours in the kitchen preparing all the necessaries to satisfy the appetites of Red Lion's hungry students.



There are, in almost every organization, those people who qualify as unsung heroes. Red Lion Area High School is no exception, for its hardworking handymen, the janitors, come under this classification. To these falls the problem of keeping our school spotlessly clean and in good repair. Besides these daily duties, there are always the little incidentals such as light bulbs to be replaced, desks to be fixed, radiators to be unclogged, chairs to be set up, wastebaskets to be emptied, blackboards to be washed, snow and coal to be shoveled, and, yes, maybe even a little gum to be scraped . . . never a dull moment.

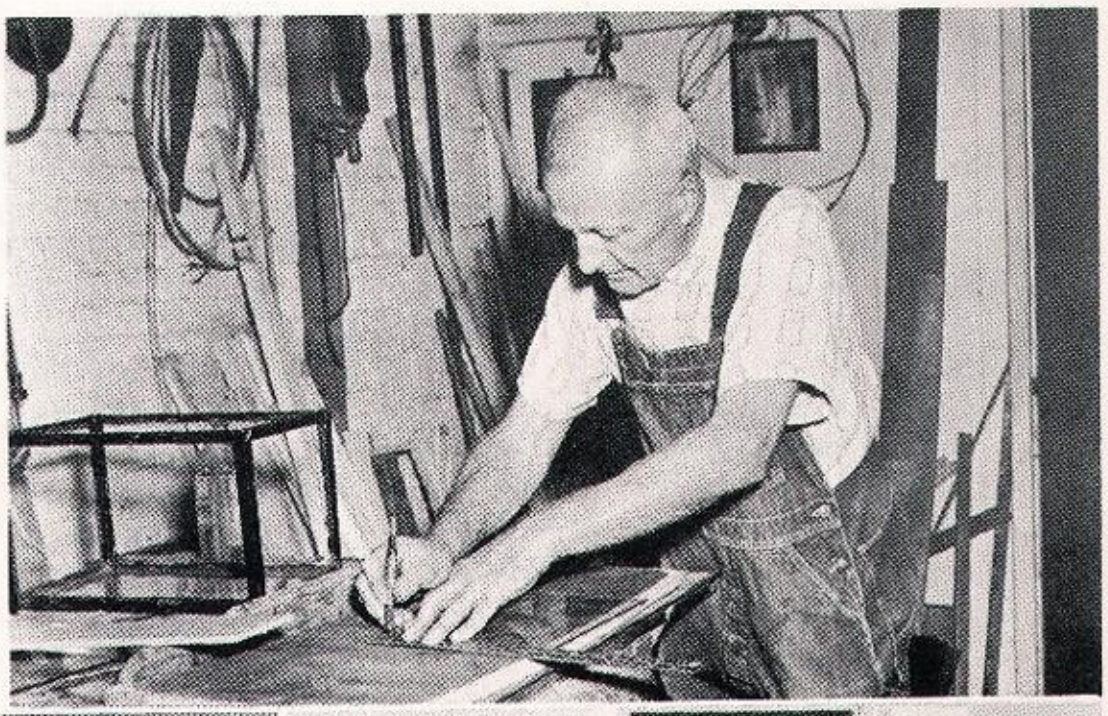
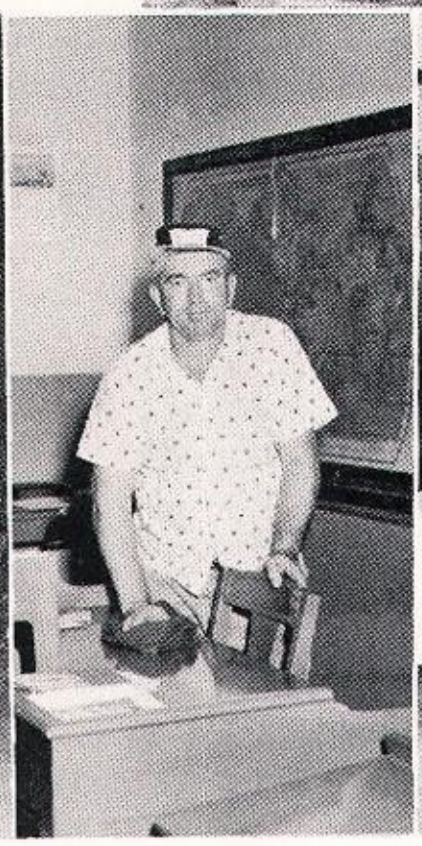
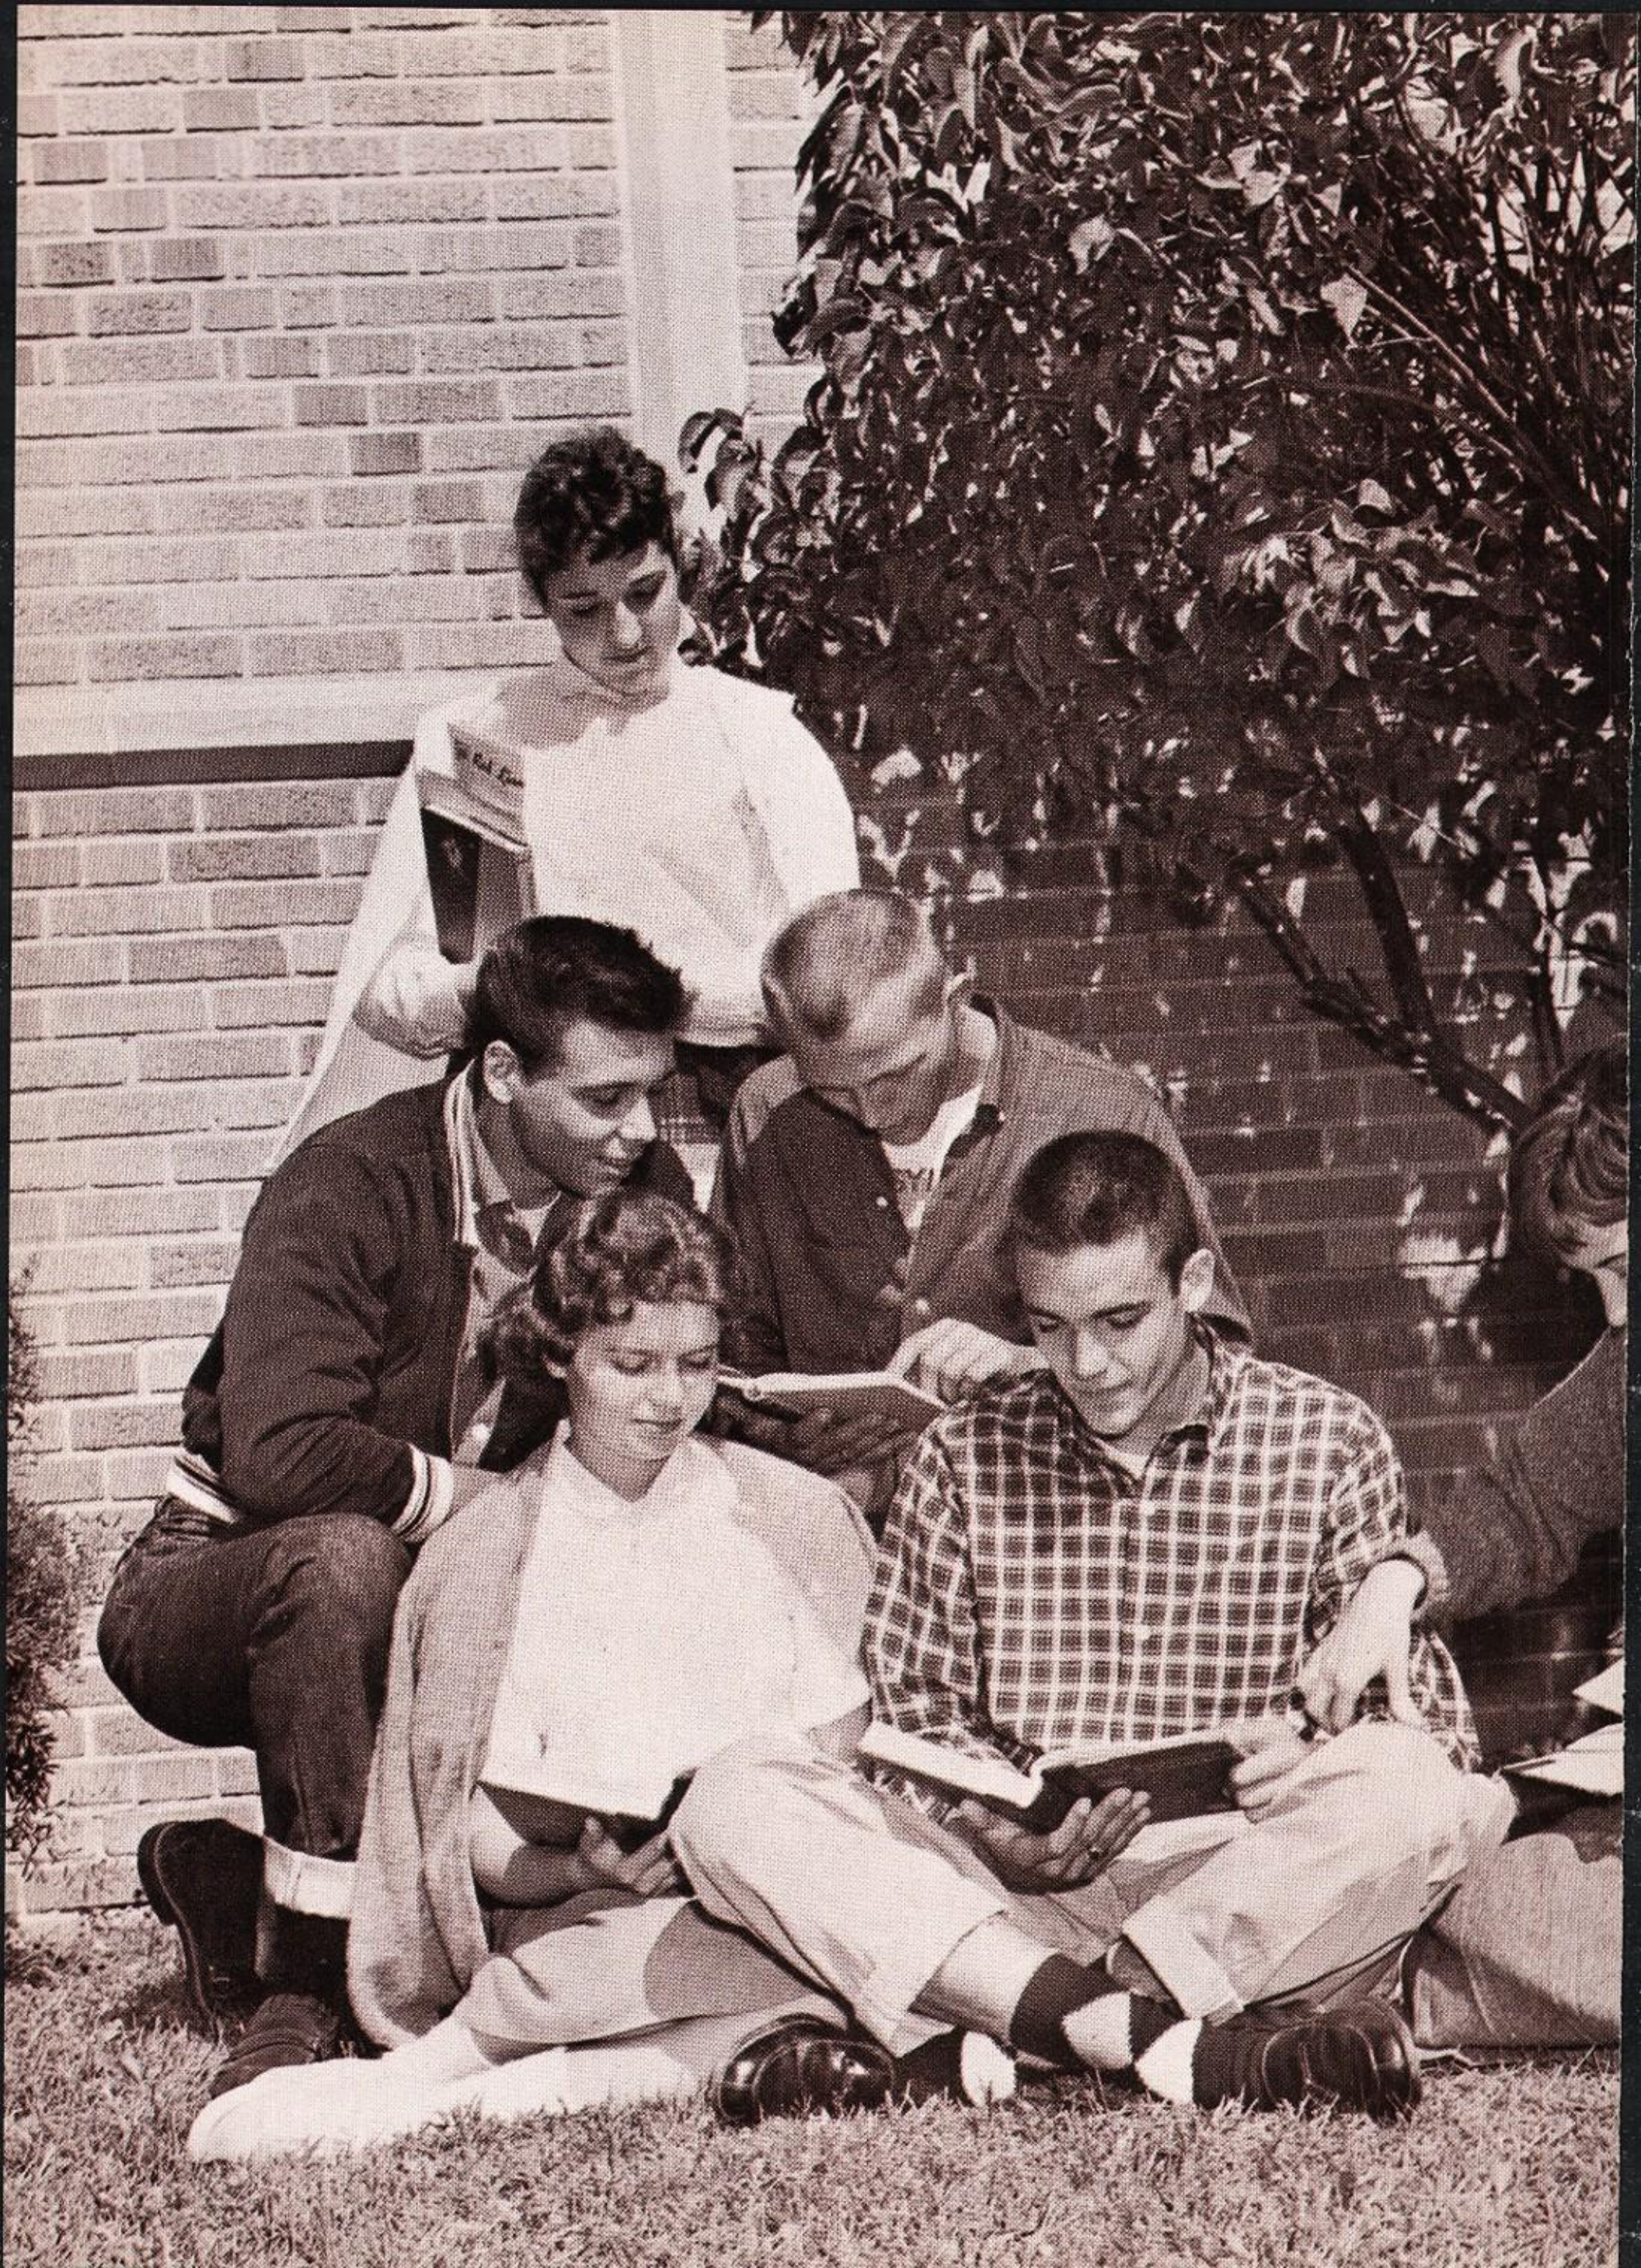
Crowds such as this one on Orientation Day keep both the cooks and janitors operating in high gear.



Our head custodian, Mr. Cletus Mitzel, makes daily trips across the street, dividing his time between R. L. A. H. S. and the elementary building.

His cohorts: Christopher Keener loading his trusty wheelbarrow for another trip to the furnace; night custodian Harry Tome polishing up for next day classes; James Waltemyer and Charles Mitzel keeping the locker rooms in top-notch condition.





CURRICULUM

This, obviously, is the most important part of school, the real reason for the taxpayers' investment. Yet there are times when it may seem the villain in the eyes of the unhappy student, who has accumulated too many items of unfinished business. We've all had our ups and downs, but as a general rule we managed to get through. We've had a lot of fun in our classes; our worthy mentors, however, made sure it wasn't all fun. The tests that caught us unawares . . . the crashing of glass or booming explosions from the chemistry lab . . . the hieroglyphics in numerals on the math boards . . . the weird sounds when we tried our first French expressions . . . these are but a few of the many classroom experiences that WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

Impressed by these busy-looking scholars? Do you think there's a big test in the near future? Might be, for Nancy Newcomer, Gil Smith, Sandy Dietz, Ted Miller, Armand Conaway, Joyce Dixon, and Bill Freeman certainly look as though they're cramming for something. They probably have deduced that seven heads are better than one.

Pupils in high school are like snowflakes; no two are alike. For this reason our school provides various courses, designed to fit the needs of both those who wish to specialize and those who wish to study for general purposes.

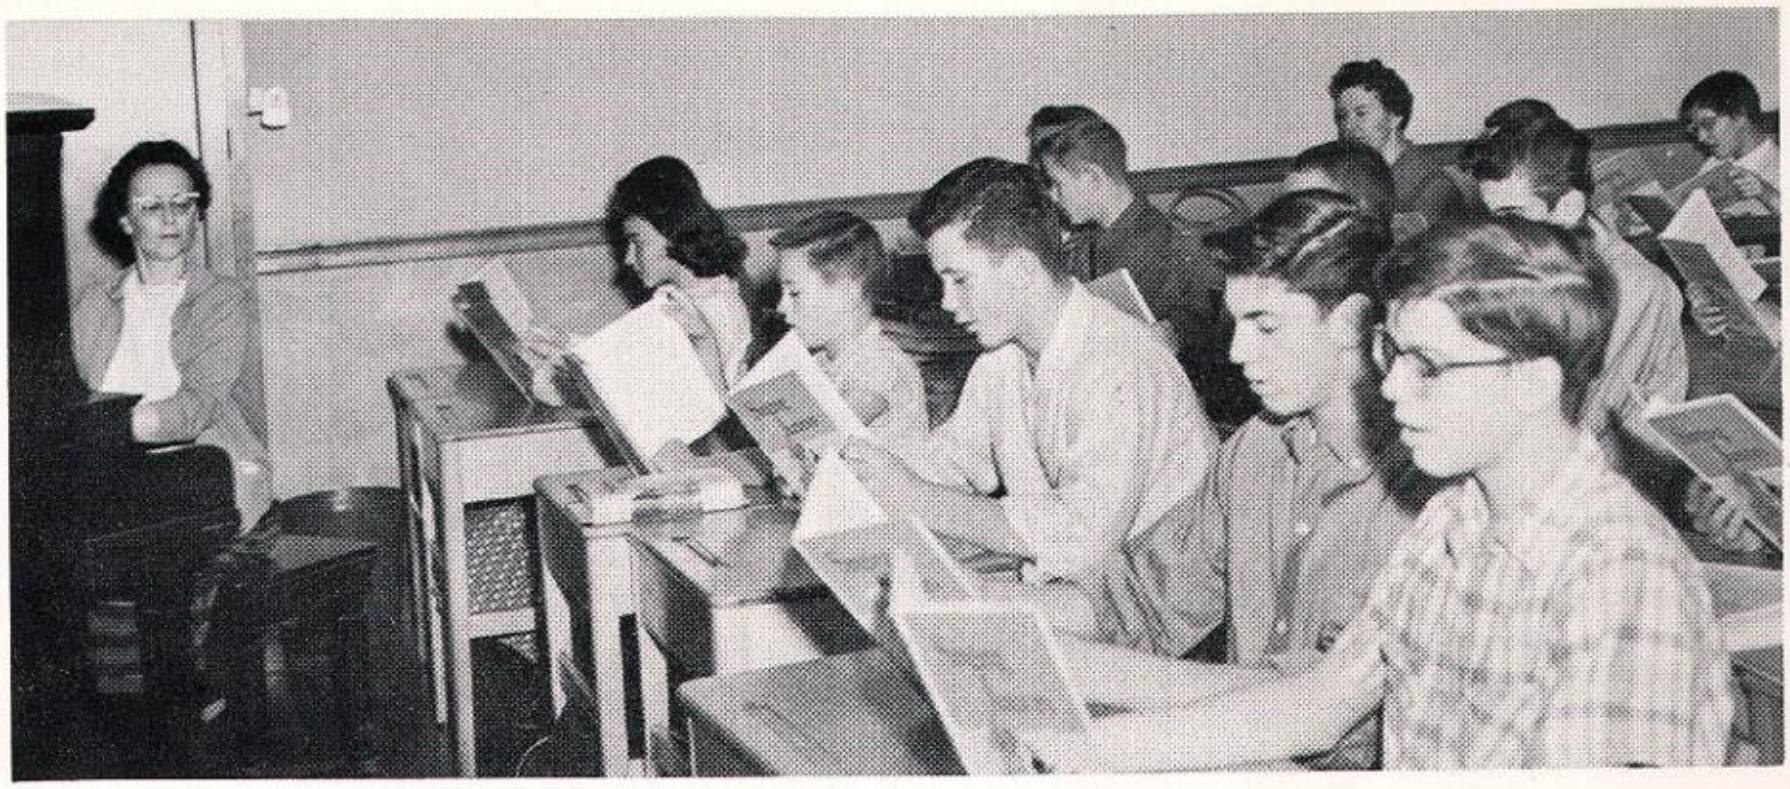
Of the six branches on this curriculum tree, five are in the first category, and the sixth, commonly called the general course, takes care of those people who for one reason or another settle for a course without a definite goal. Some of the content is similar to that of the other five, for English, social studies, health and physical education we have always with us. In other subject areas, however, a certain amount of flexibility is allowed.

In P. O. D. assembly, Susan Smith proceeds to tell why her choice for governor should be elected. She must have been convincing; he was!

Educational recreation . . . Patti Grove and Edward Kesselring scan the library magazines as they hunt for an interesting article.

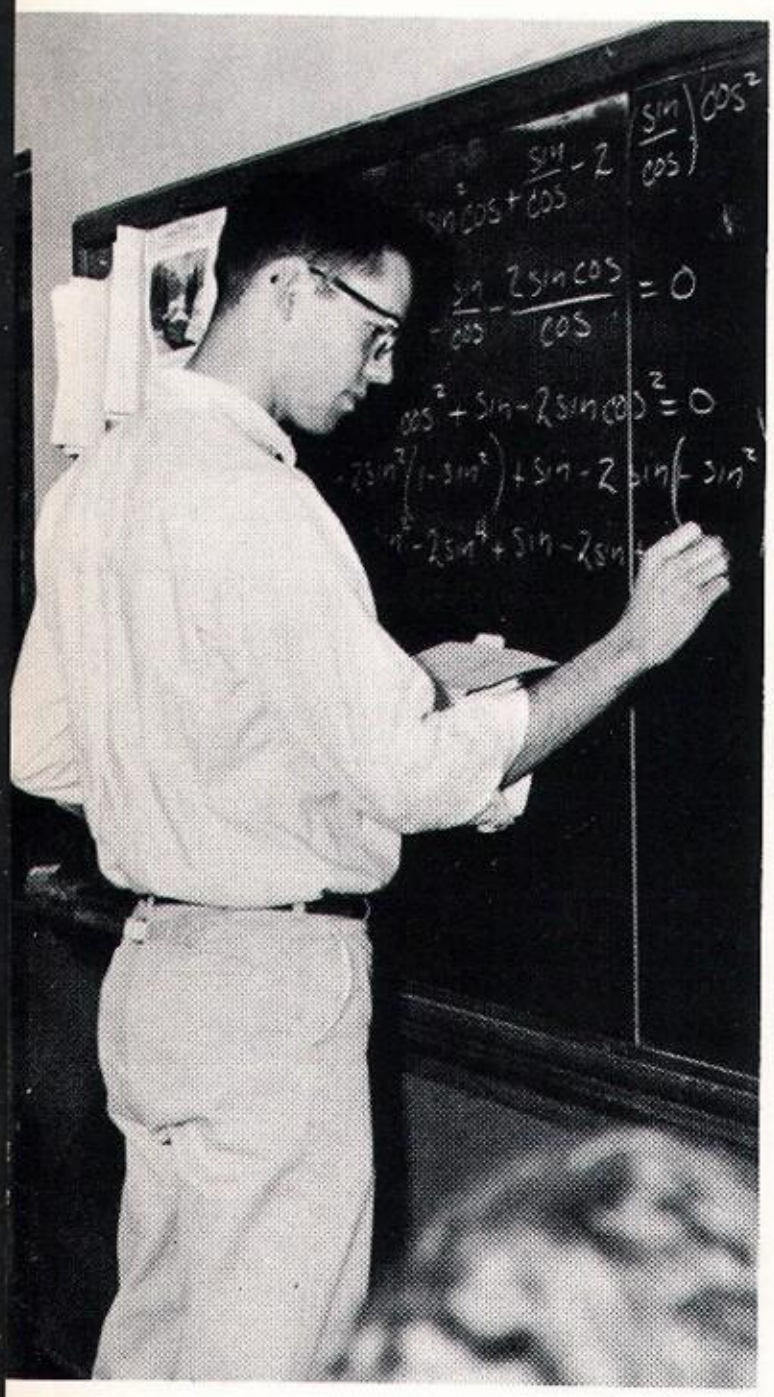
Have an accurate pattern and the moccasins will be a perfect fit . . . the result of Joyce Brenneman's hard labor in advanced art was a gratifying A.



Mrs. Adams strikes the keys and nods her head. That's the signal for this ninth grade music class to burst into joyous singing, while their melodies filter through the halls providing a musical background for classes nearby.

In driver education Mr. Maddox points out that these familiar road signs are not to be ignored; Susan Stewart seems determined to learn everything possible to show the male population that there are good women drivers.

And the music comes out here . . . Mr. Myers and Janelle Herman explain to a general science class how beautiful music is produced by an instrument.



It may seem Greek to some, but to Tom Melhorn this is just another seemingly endless trigonometry problem to be taken in stride. Incidently, there is a solution . . . and he'll find it!

To all who have attended high school, the college preparatory curriculum is reasonably familiar, with roughly forty percent of the students scheduled in it. It is an interesting and engrossing course offering a reasonable variety of subjects, stressing the basic ones. Most pupils with college in mind

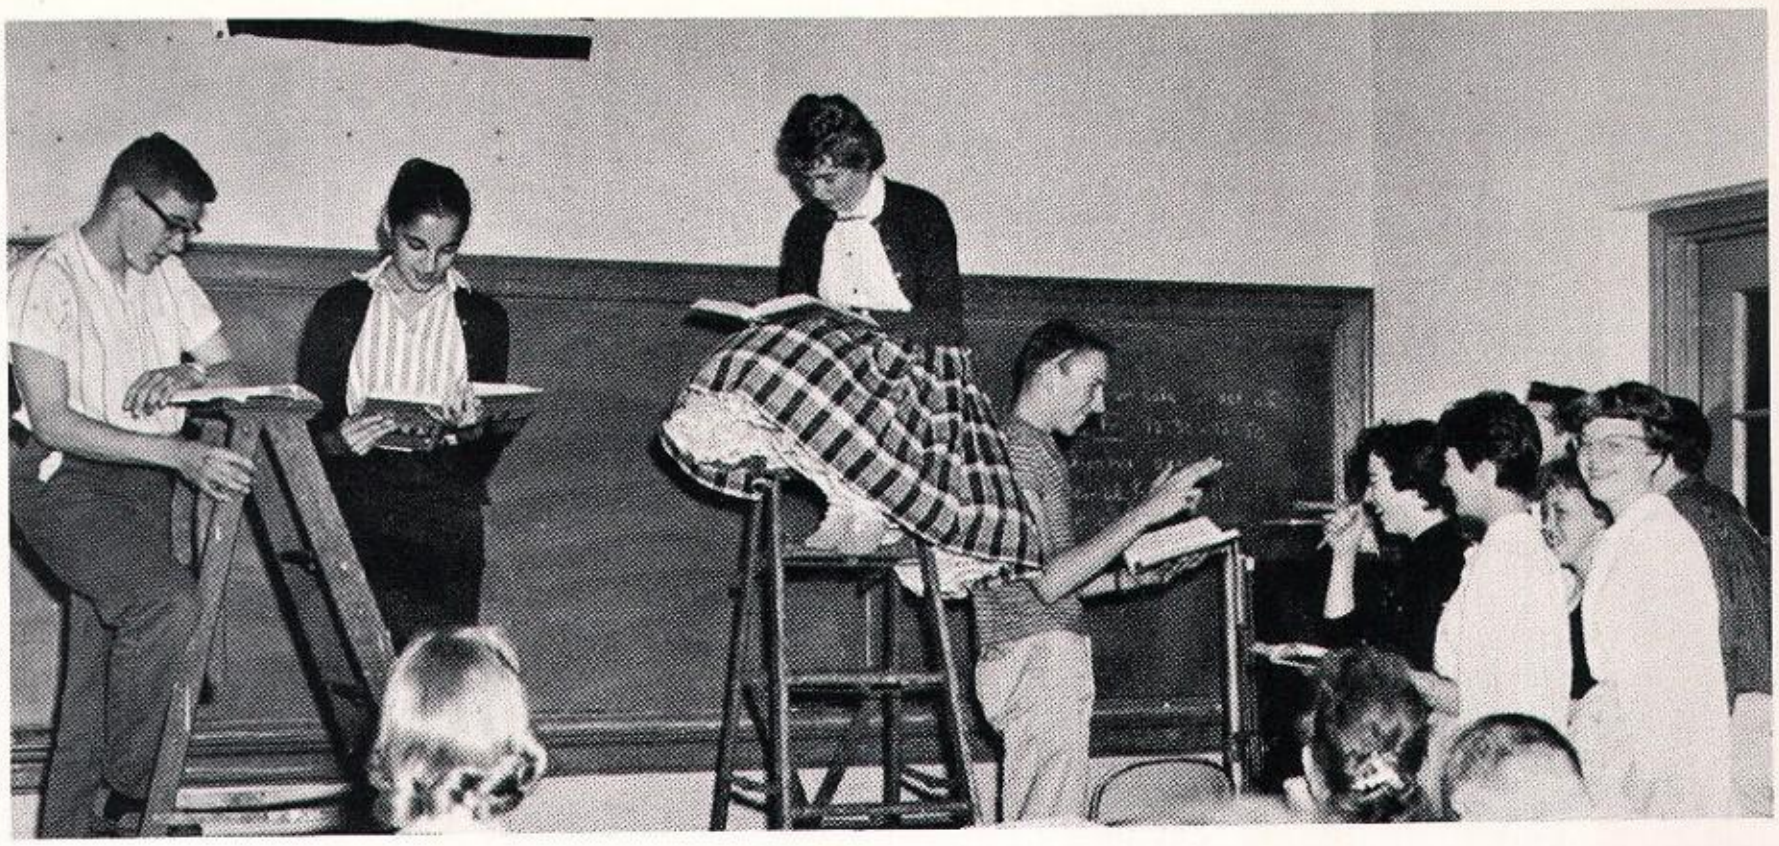
sign for this course. For four years they concentrate their efforts on English, social studies, math, science, and languages . . . allowing time, naturally, for the required phys ed and the desired extracurriculars . . . with the aim that, following graduation, they will be admitted to the college of their choice with a background geared for their particular field.

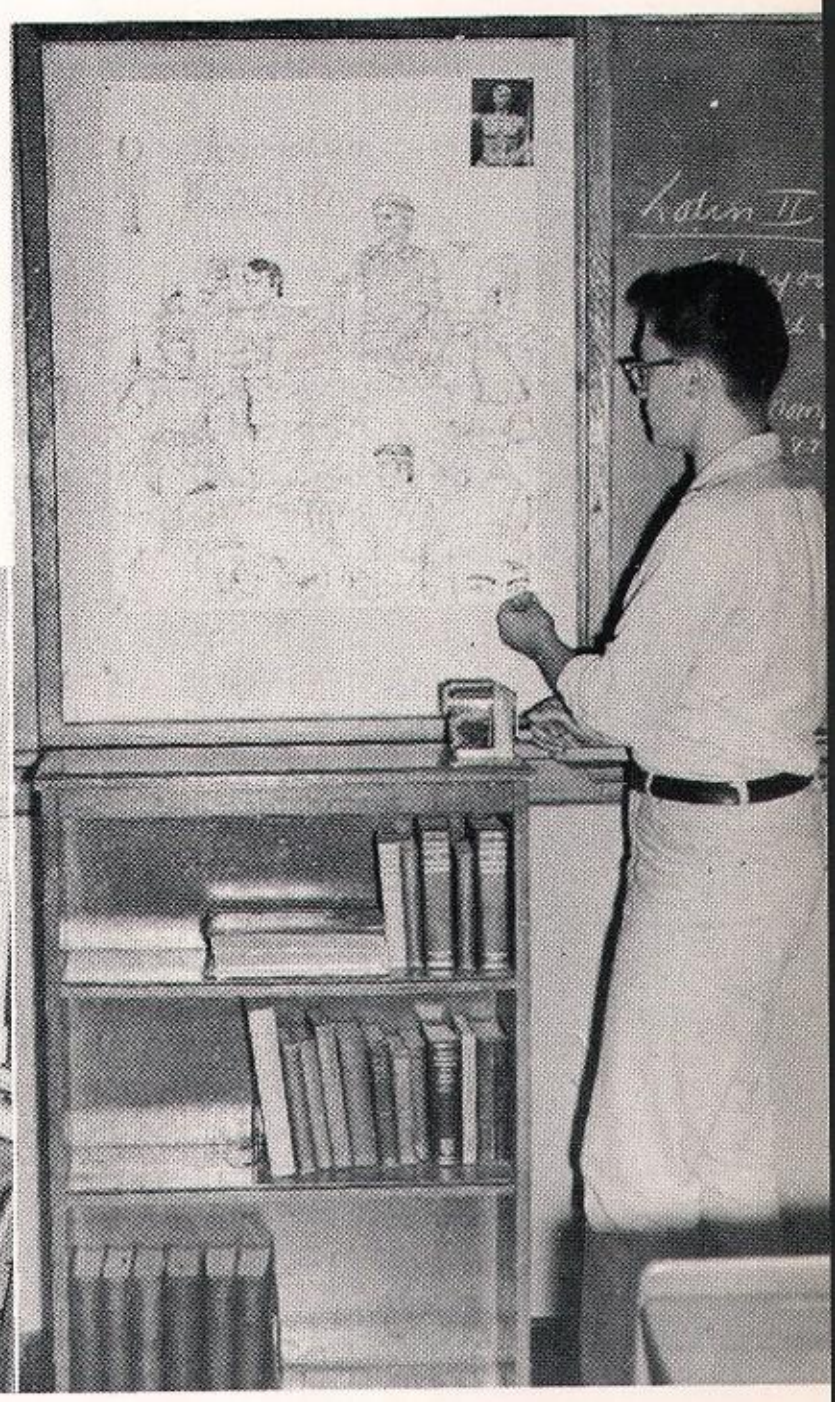
Most of the persons in this curriculum are ready for real work, for the emphasis on college training is stronger now than ever before. This year eleven of them were given the opportunity to share in an experiment in individual work, the material coming from the International Correspondence School. Ever since Sputnik went up even students are wondering if they can't cram a few more subjects into their schedules.

No one knows just what Geraldine Rider's making but it seems Betty Bosley doesn't quite trust her ability in chemistry. Patricia Grove looks a bit skeptical too. Just let a group of girls loose in the chemistry lab and witness the results . . . just kidding. Some of these girls do right well in the lab and even have a flair for mixing potent potions.

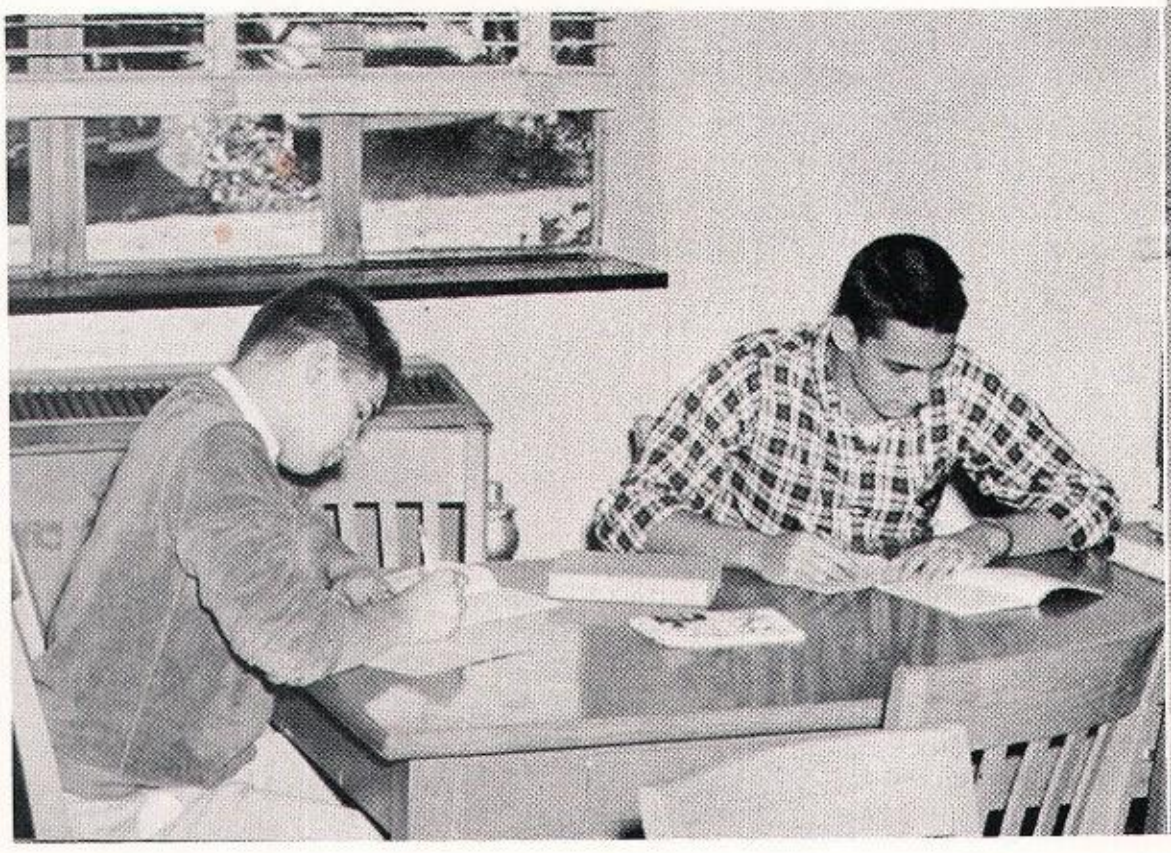


Classroom becomes stage as English students dramatize Thornton Wilder's "Our Town." Tom Zeigler and Jo Finn converse upstairs via the ladder over homework while the choir in the background, directed by maestro Gable, provides sound effects.

Joel Michaels puts his artistic ingenuity to work by providing one of his masterpieces for the Latin bulletin board. This one portrays a scene in the life of that good old Roman, Augustus Caesar.



Two of the students participating in the I. G. S. program—Dale Smith, senior, and Dale Uhler, junior—handle assignments in the Hyson Room. Judging by their studious expressions, the experiment seems to be working quite well.



Commercial students get an insight into the operation of well-run offices as they take a tour of two town banks. Here Donna Overmiller, a Red Lion commercial graduate, explains the technicalities of running a check-proofing machine while the students peer dubiously at the complicated-looking array of gadgets. The procedures and machinery involved in the banking business prove fascinating to seniors heading for careers in offices.

Darlene Sowers operates the mimeograph, one of the messiest to handle, albeit one of the most useful machines in any office. A secretary's training just wouldn't be complete without experience on this and its numerous complicated relatives.

Varied interests of pupils will always cause a demand for specialized courses, example being the commercial sections. By utilizing this course, students are prepared if and when they decide to take an office job following graduation from high school. This preparation includes the different phases of office practice. Beginning early with business fundamentals, they get a taste of what to expect. They can plan their future as clerk or stenographer

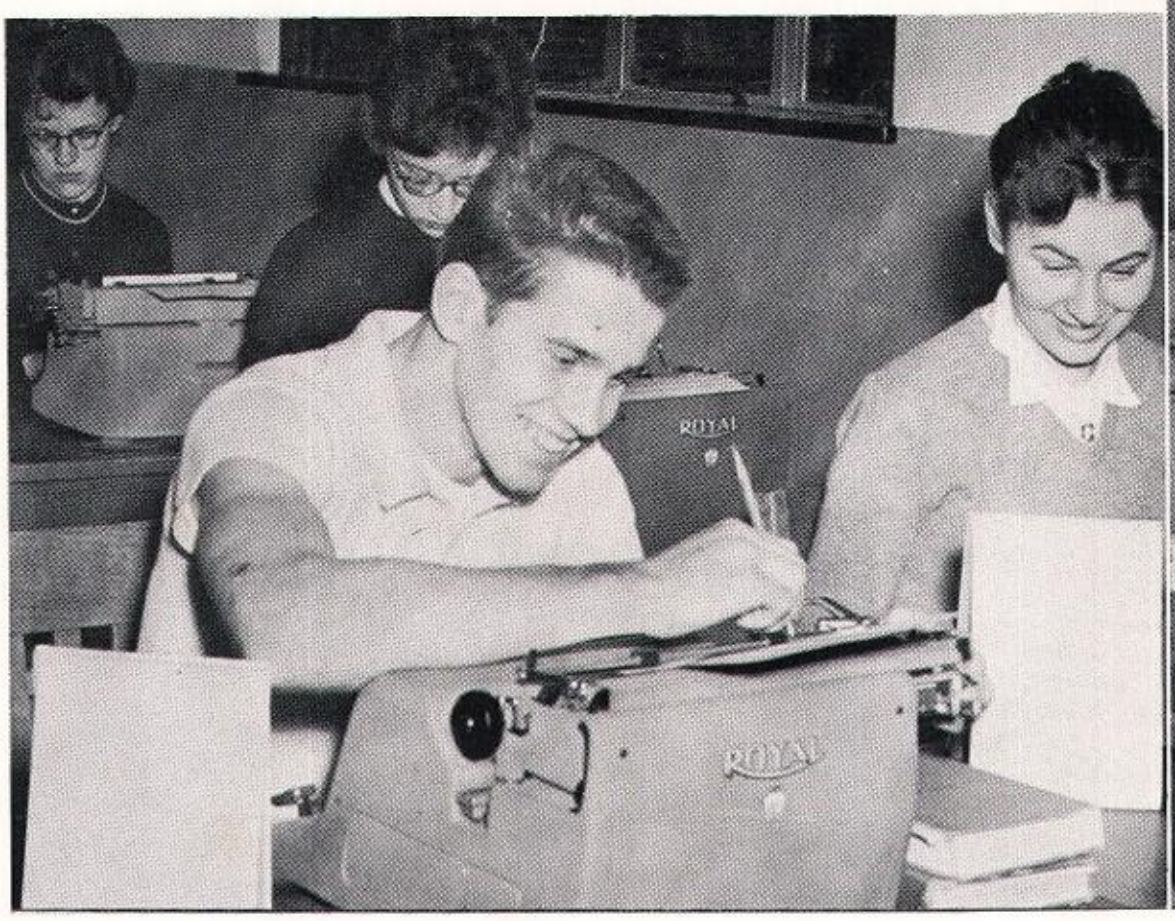
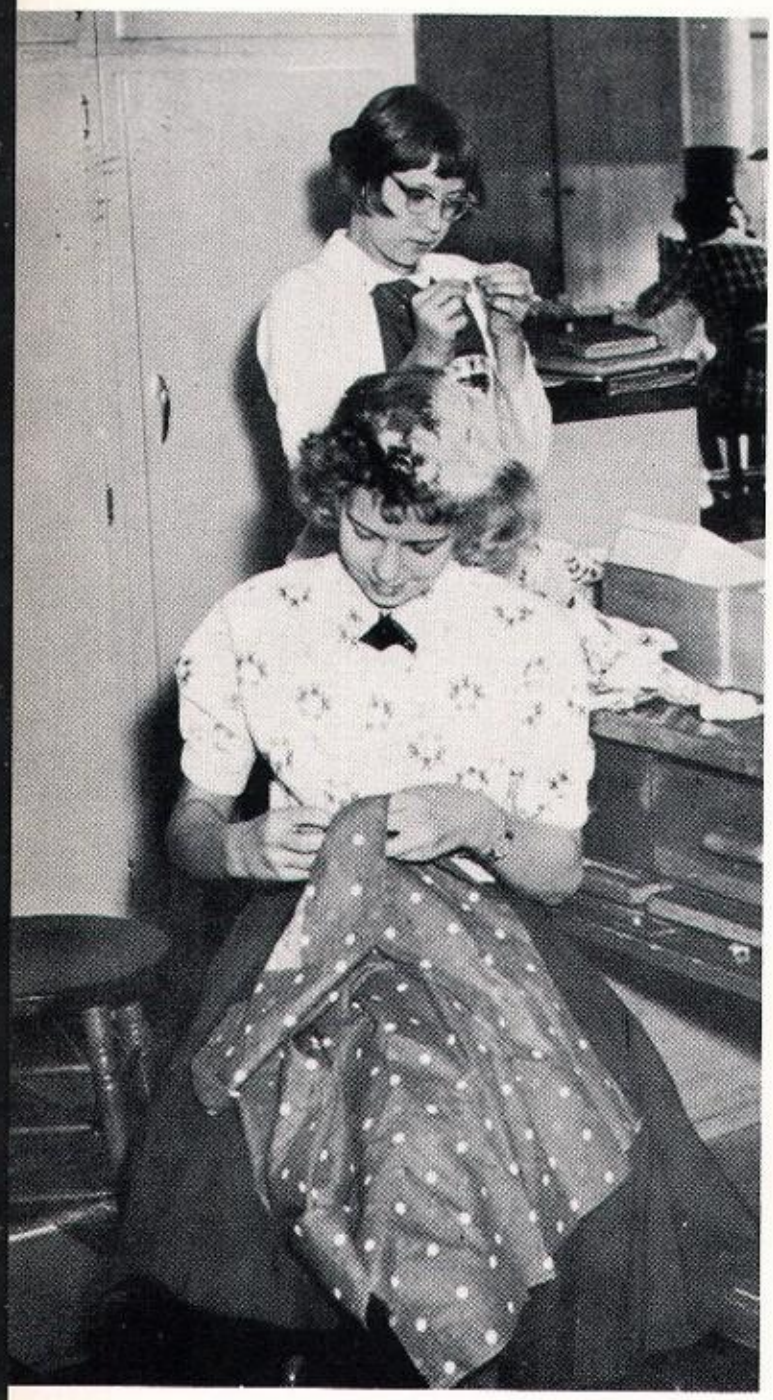
and chart the course accordingly. The sound of clacking keys and banging typewriter carriages and the sight of students poring over strange-looking shorthand symbols are the usual trademarks of this group.

Successful bookkeepers, secretaries too, will find the adding machine a great help, so Brenda Grim, Nona Conrad, and Galen Baker learn the art of using it. Barbara Hershner, however, is concerned at the moment with the mimeoscope.

Patty Amspacher brings her file cards up to date. Learning the ABC's of filing requires quick thinking and nimble fingers.

Tut! Tut! Barry Smeltzer is erasing a typing mistake . . . that should never happen to a senior! From Mary Raver's smile, one might guess the cause, as well as result, was rather amusing.





Needle threading is a serious business with Sharon Norris; as her neighbor, Melody Miller, diligently continues the handwork on her project. These seventh graders find their first bout with sewing not as hard as it first seemed, and definitely intriguing.

Even with the increased emphasis on science and math today, the importance of the home ec department must not be overlooked. Under the skilled instruction of Mrs. Uhler and Mrs. Laucks,

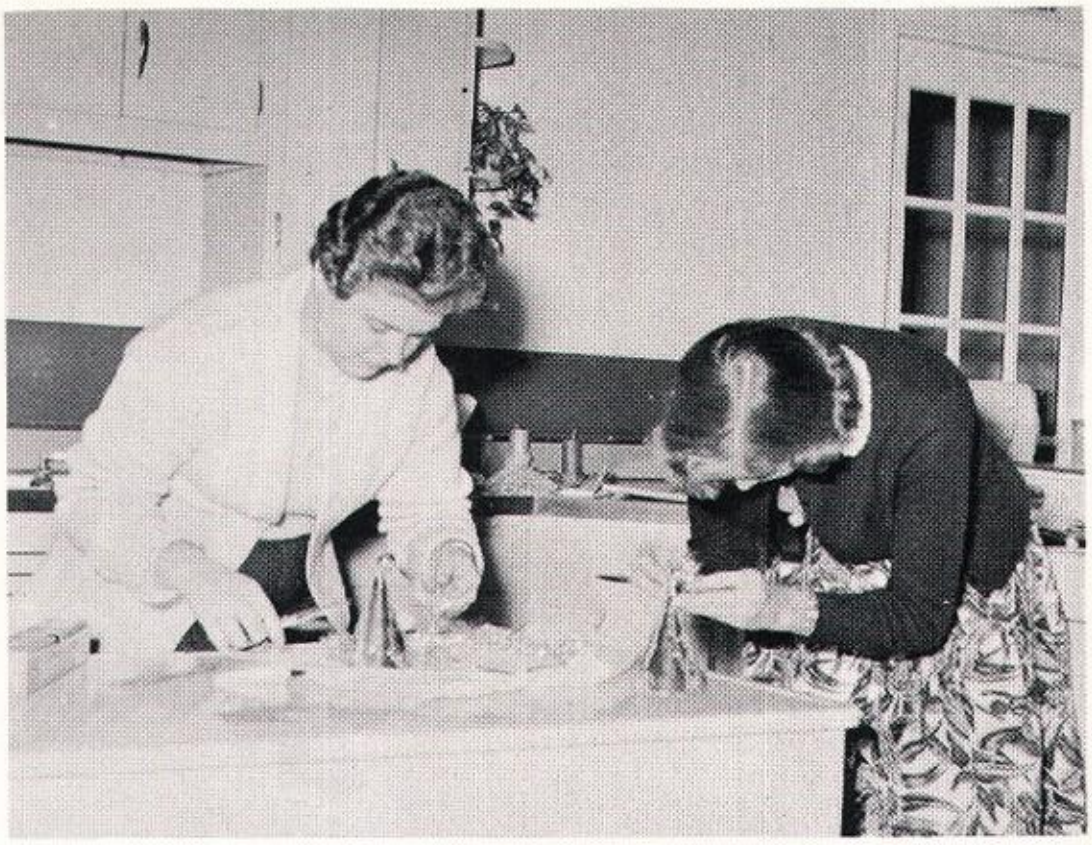
learn to make well-balanced, tasty meals and to sew their own clothes. In the cooking department, improvement usually comes quickly since the girls eat their own cooking in class. While the cooks are busily trying new dishes, the hum of sewing machines calls attention to the fact that there are seamstresses in the making; also, modern fashions seen in the halls are likely to be the product of new-found skill with a sewing machine.

Not all classes are spent in cooking and sewing as future homemakers take time out for discussions on dating, etiquette and child care. During some fun-filled periods they arrange new hair styles or criticize their own personalities, dress, and habits. This well-rounded course and the knowledge gained here should make future homemaking a pleasure.

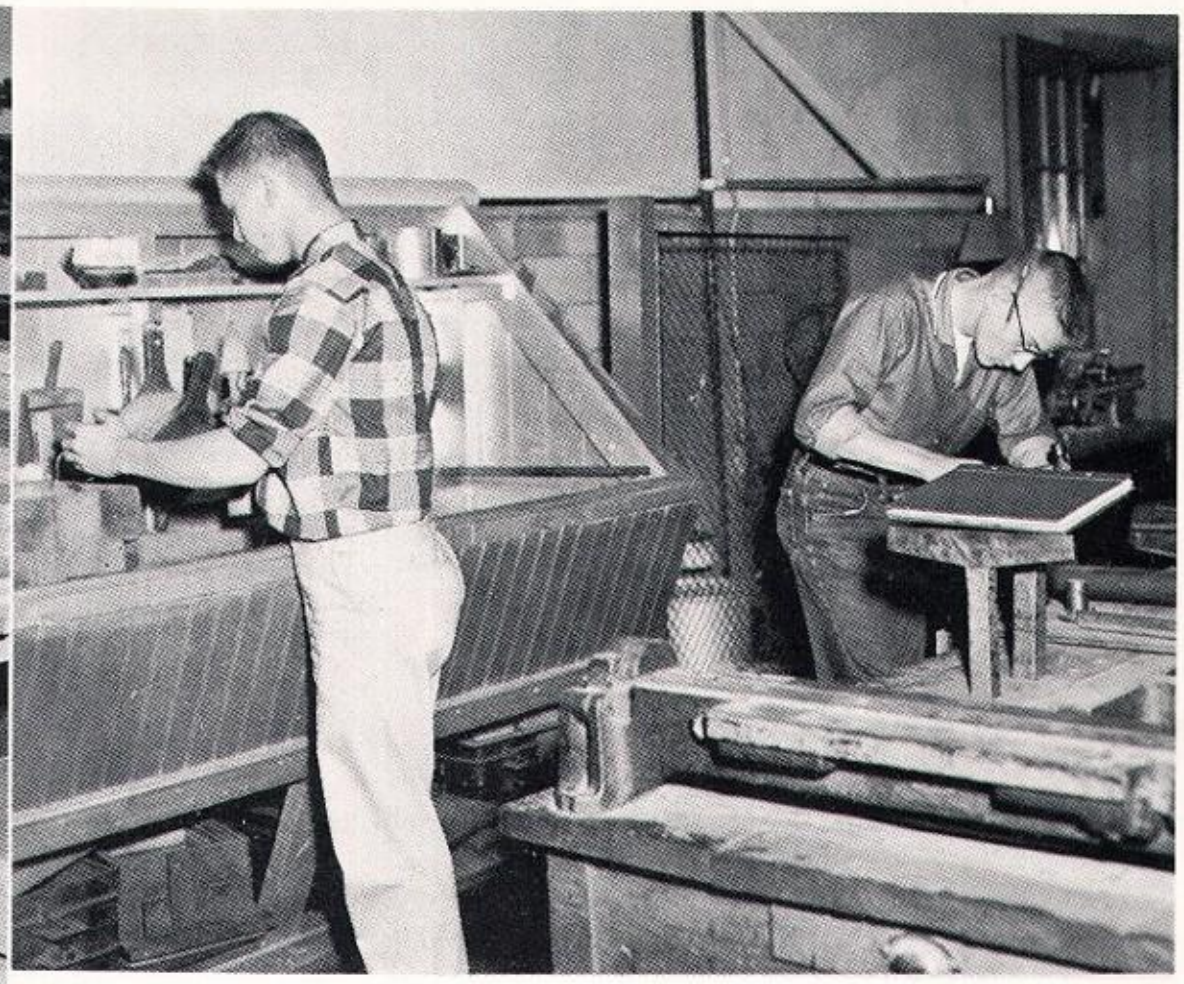
A big thrill for the girls is the home ec fashion show . . . this one was so good it was put on twice, at the Art Exhibit and Orientation Day, with the models enjoying every minute of it. Right now, Brenda Graham is giving information concerning the dress being modeled by Diane F. Smith.



December finds the girls working on decorations for the holiday season . . . Nancy Kilgore and Eva Grove are concentrating their efforts on Christmas tree favors.

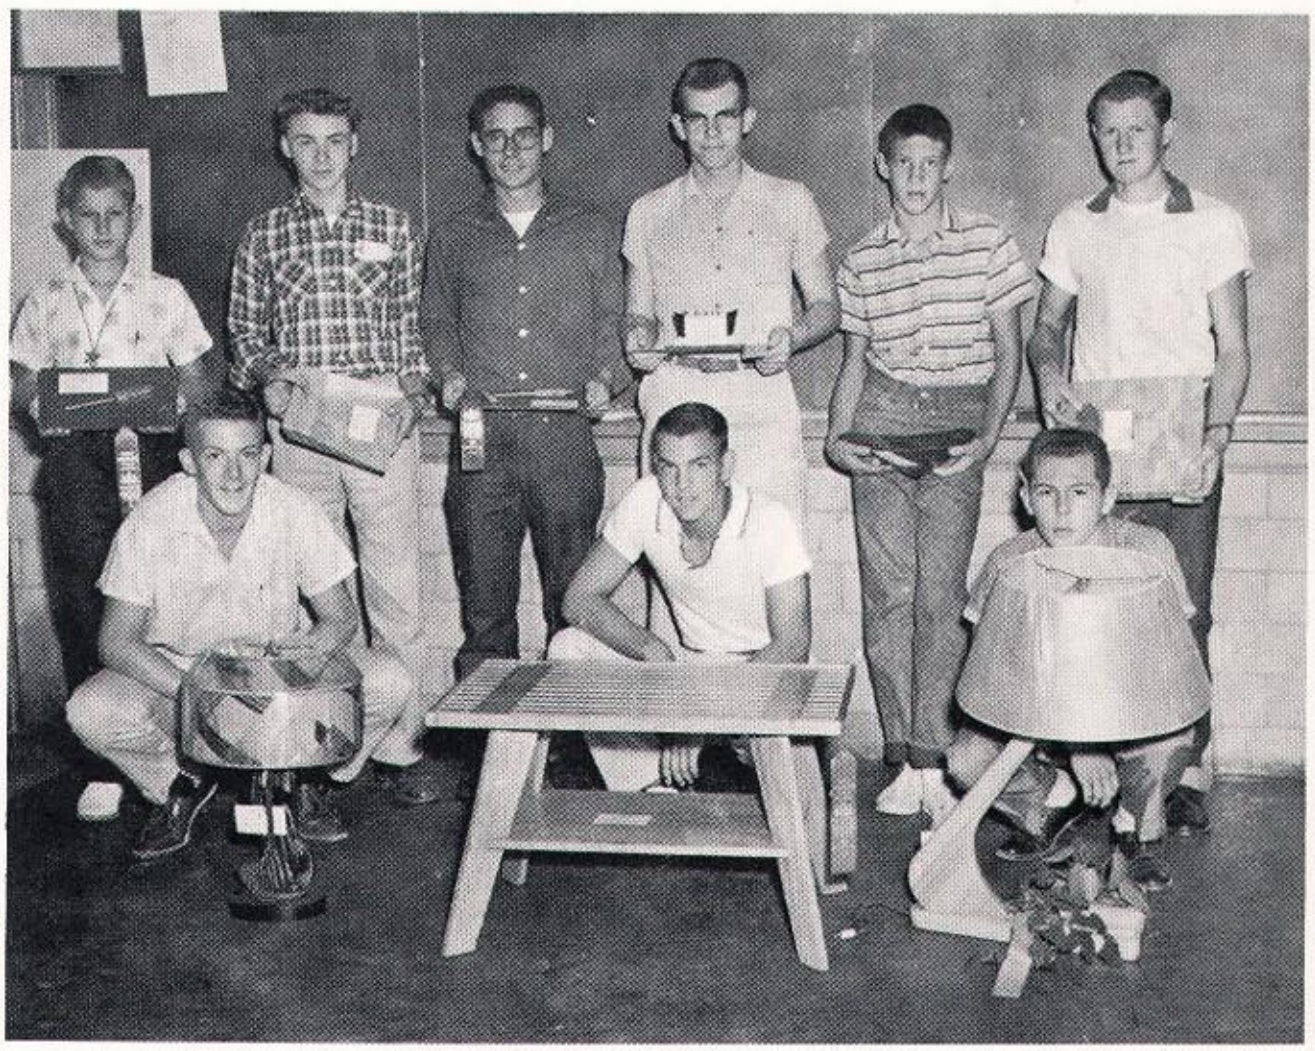
Kathy Arentz has a standing period while Betty Snyder pins her skirt hem. Sewing is much more enjoyable when the labor is shared.

The rewards of hard work . . . after the preliminaries of preparing and cooking, Nancy Yeater, Darlene Waltemyer, Holly Ann Ropp, and Arlene Wallick sit down and enjoy their luncheon. From the look on their faces it must have turned out just right. This is the best way to learn to cook—by eating your own cooking.



"Never a dull moment," say our handymen, Wayne Spiker and Henry Smith as they round out a busy day in the foundry.

'Midst sawdust and wood shavings, we find our carpenters of tomorrow, Donald Holtzapple and John Markey, apparently engrossed in their projects.



Proud smiles flash on the faces of these shop boys, whose projects were exhibited at the York Fair. Kneeling are: Ralph DeShong, Jan Hall, Tim Cope. Standing: Larry Rost, Gabriel Hildebrand, John McKinley, Bill Linnemans, Kenny Stearn, Bill Anderson.

Another of the six faces of our curricular program is in the field of industrial arts, a truly important area in this modern age. Approximately twenty graduate yearly from this course, which is geared to provide students with experience in such fields as woodworking, metalworking, plastics, printing, and foundry practice. All boys in junior high have required training in the course; in senior high it is a matter of choice. Our workshop is a do-it-yourselfer's paradise with every kind of material imaginable on hand and row upon row of high quality tools and machines for every job. One distinct advantage held by the shop boys over most other students is that all creations become the property of their creators, usually at a very nominal fee. The stands, lamps, bookcases, and such, coming from this department are the envy of less-skilled classmates.

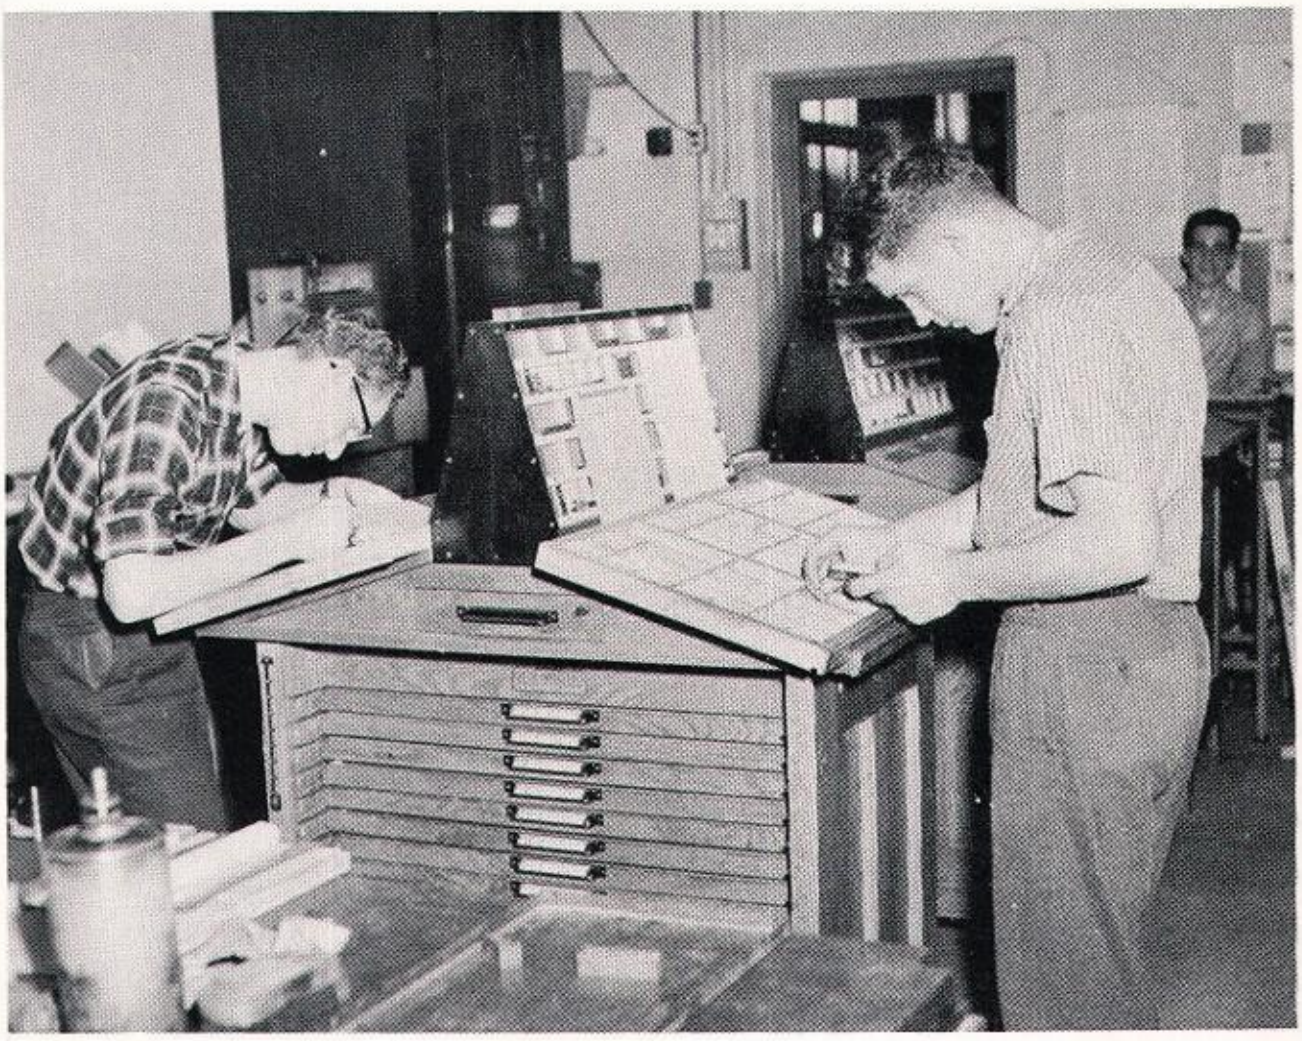
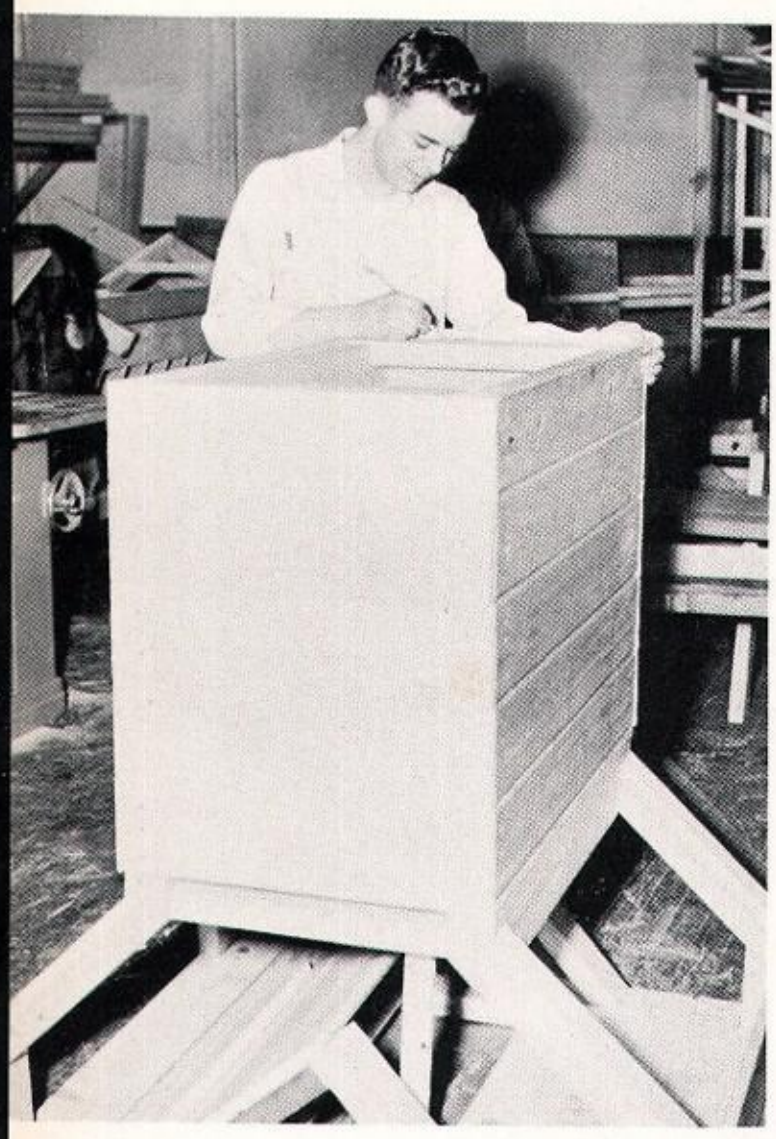
Another facet of the course is the mechanical drawing room which also contains excellent drafting equipment and supplies. These areas, together with the math necessary for good industrial practice, team up to turn out an industrial arts graduate with an excellent background of shop practice and procedure, who is well qualified to take his place in industry.

A first for the class of '59 . . . Gladys Fleagle invades the mechanical drawing classes, a domain heretofore strictly all-male at Red Lion High. Gladys is aiming for a future as a designer draftsman.



Setting type for tickets, programs, schedules, and other numerous tasks falls to the industrial art classes. Larry Markel and Thomas Love apparently have been drafted for this particular job. Like their fellow students, they have graduated from the stage of sorting type to the point on the scale where they are turning out truly professional looking pieces of work.



For the prospective farmers there is a course in vocational agriculture, beginning with the ninth grade and continuing throughout high school. Meeting twice daily, these boys have class study and discussion, highlighted by field trips and demonstrations. The main thought of these scholars of the soil is learning to farm

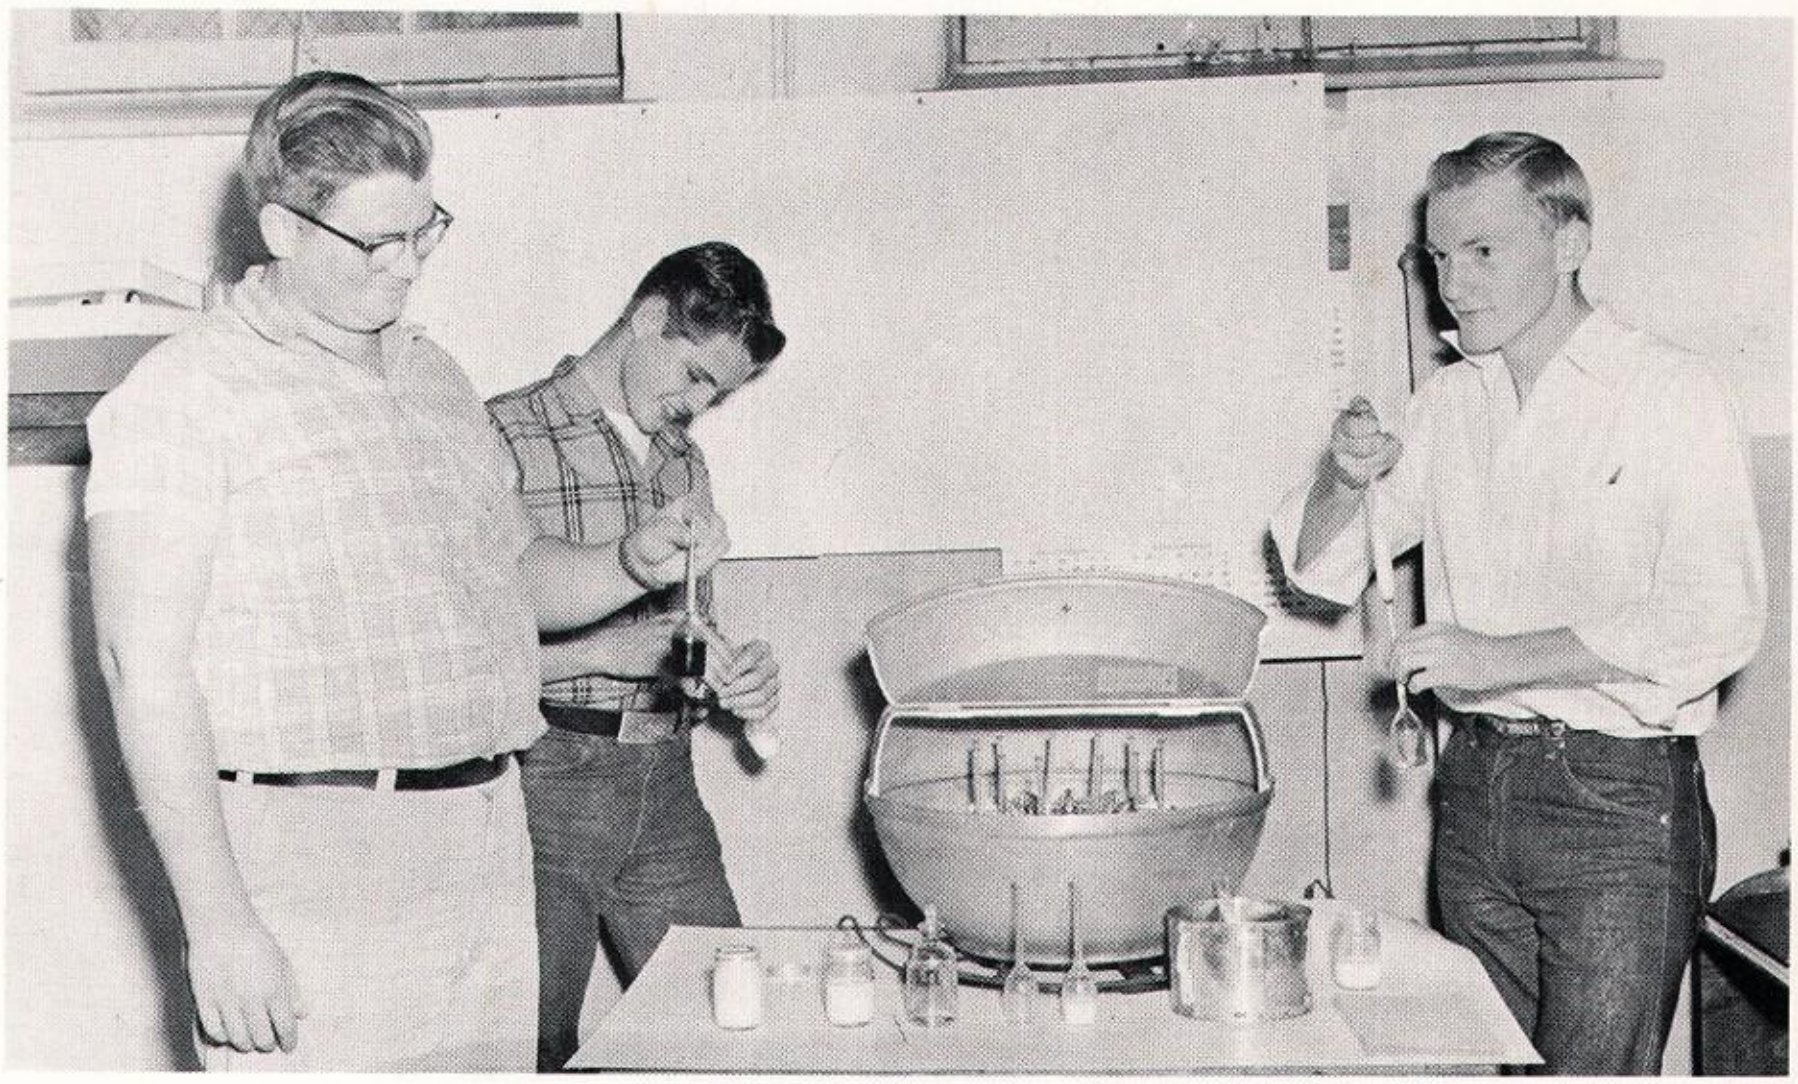
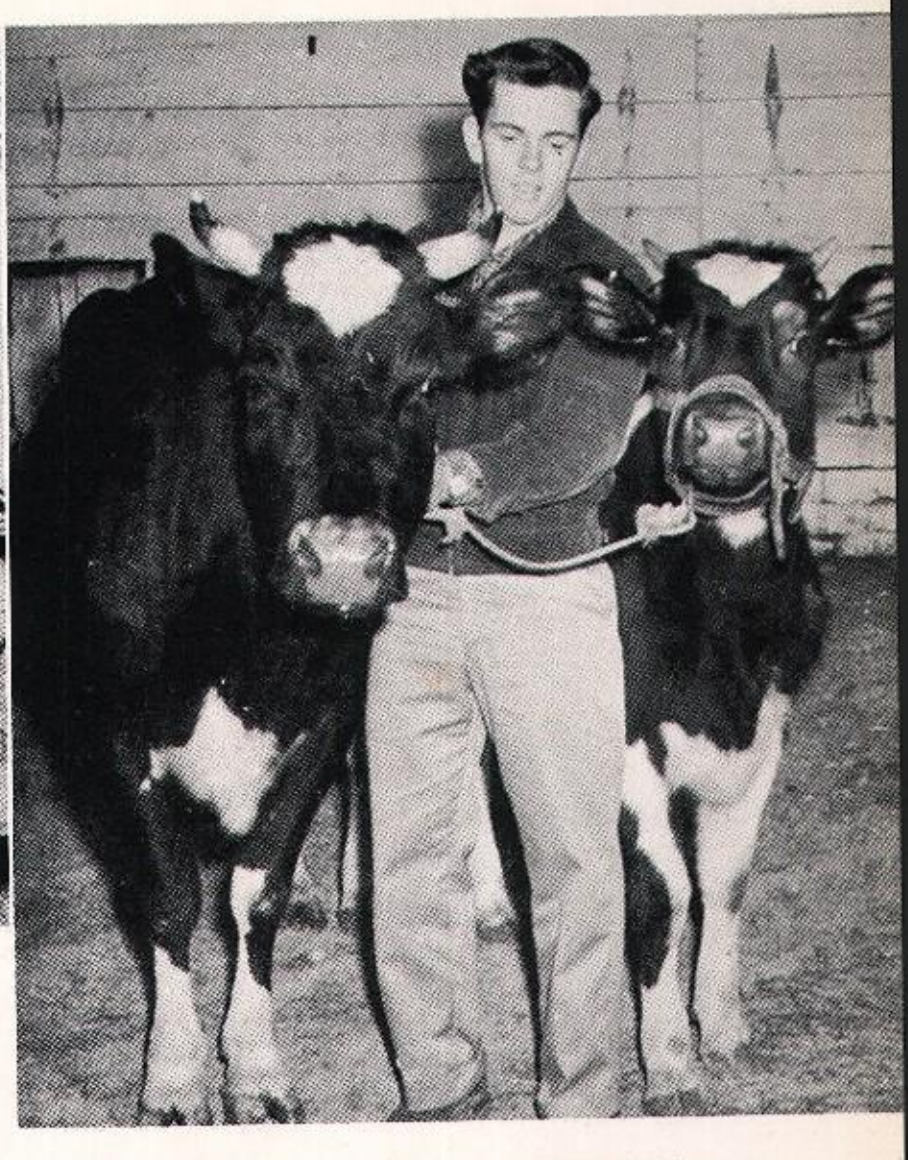
as well as they can. Projects are their homework. The ag teacher, Mr. Myers, occasionally makes inspection tours to the boys' homes. He helps the boys work out difficult situations and become accustomed to the "ground rules" of farming. Some of the enterprises practiced in the community are animal raising, farm mechanics, farm management, farm economics, crop growing, soil conservation practices, and the all-important use of tools. Future farms will be well run by grads of this course.

James Howard with his agricultural project, a hog feeder. The feeder was built by Jim and will keep his pigs full and happy.

Testing milk for percentage of butterfat is one of the many activities of the agricultural students. Dennis Bankert and John Anderson get a charge out of this project, but Bob Arnold doesn't say anything.

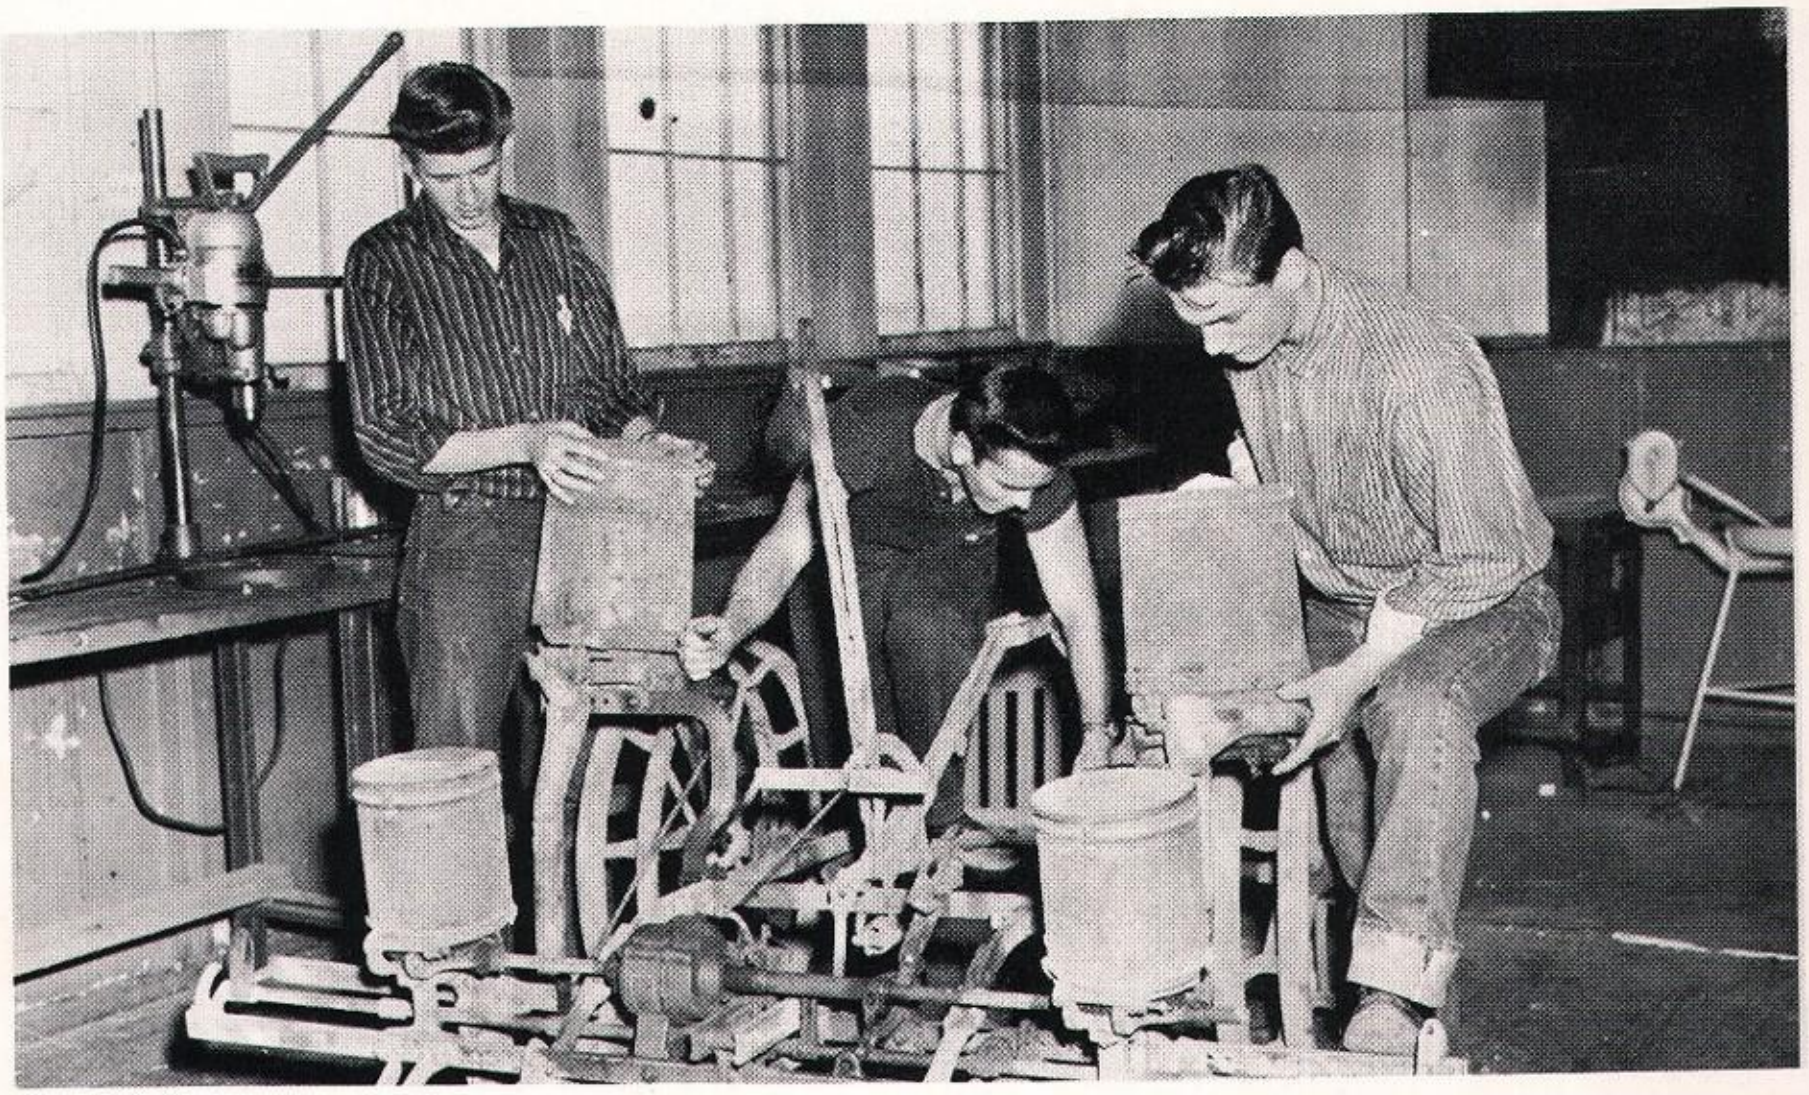


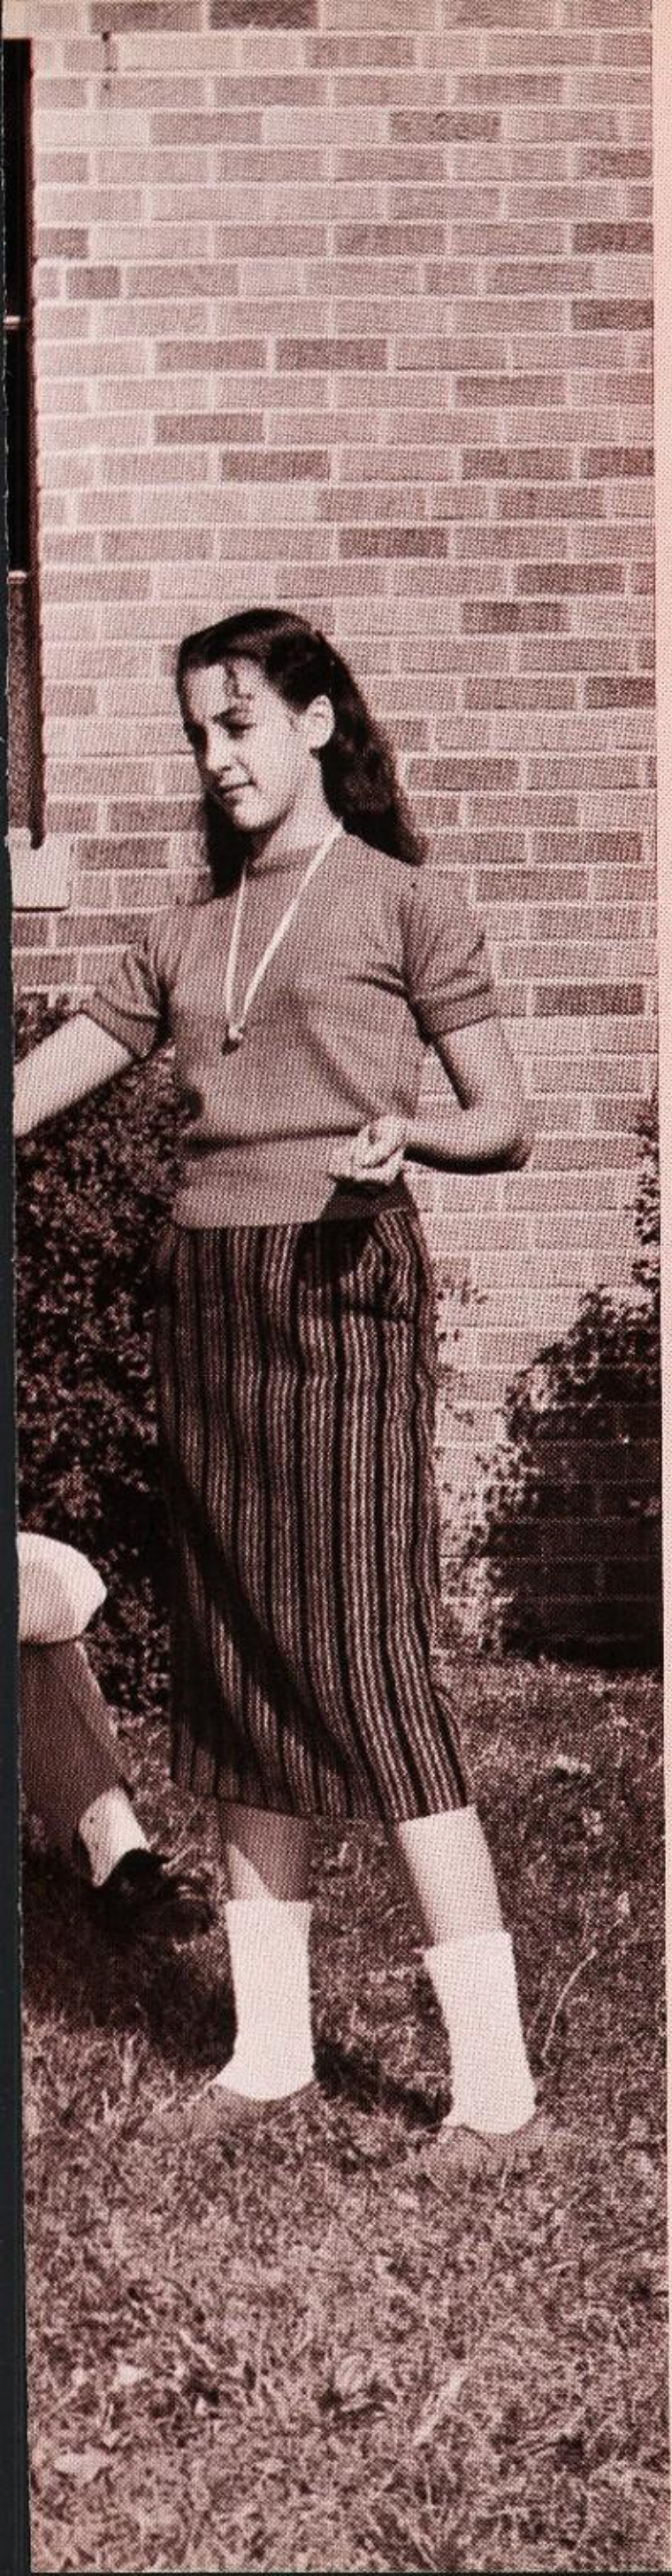
Cleaning chickens is quite a job, according to Perry Kauffman and Clair Garner, who, after a couple years' experience, have become adept at handling the fowls.



Man's best friend is a cow . . . Robert Schlag slightly improvises on the old saying as he exhibits his project, a heifer and a cow.

One of the big jobs of a farmer is keeping his machinery farmshape and in order. Jerry Robinson, Robert Schlag and Palmer Kauffman are faced with rebuilding a corn planter.





UNDERCLASSMEN

As seniors, we find it hard to forget our days as underclassmen, and an impossibility to overlook our younger schoolmates, dignified by that very title. It's hard to tell just what kind of characters we were while still in this group, but from our vantage point of seniority we admit freely that underclassmen give a very special something to school life. They raise the sales of the school publications and back our sports and social activities. Then, too, it gives the morale of a senior a boost to see underclassmen impatiently waiting to get in line at the cafe, to say nothing of what happens to his ego when a young admirer earnestly requests a picture or an autograph. From the youngest seventh grader to the most mature junior, they are nice to have around, and their friendship WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

Caught by the current hula-hoop craze are these freshmen, Nan Sheffer and Sue Scheckart, who are really hoopin' it up as the gallery looks on. The hoops have gone over big, especially for underclassmen, who seem to have little trouble keeping these glorified barrel staves circulating.

Jane Snook and Ronald Arnold are quite absorbed in a play pamphlet, just one of the several they will peruse before the junior play is chosen.

Someone once said; "There is only one thing worse than a junior in high school; and that is a senior." (The author wishes to remain anonymous.) This obviously is all said in fun and means but one thing, a junior is full of that stuff which makes clocks tick—energy. He is constantly on the lookout for a bit of fun and, schoolwise, he is well aware that he has only one year to go.

The CLASS OF 1960 at Red Lion Area High fits into this description to a T. This class, over two hundred strong, has many credits to its ability and industry. Its members have made their presence felt in just about everything that goes on around the school. Not satisfied with capturing the float prize for the fourth year running, they also walked away with the Booster Club prize for field decorations. The athletes on the class roster form a strong nucleus for varsity teams for next year and scholastically, they can exhibit some bee-yu-ti-ful report cards. All in all, they'll make a fine first graduating class from the new school.

SOPHOMORES find themselves at a sort of in-between stage—no longer the bosses of the junior high, but mere beginners in senior high. Here they have to start all over again to prove their importance. Fortunately this class is able to boast a good record in sporting events, both in interest and participation. The junior varsity basketball team is composed entirely of sophs; the football team has several sophomore regulars. But, too, these students are

and considering the different courses for a future vocation. Subjects have become more important as they decide finally which course they will continue. The scientific and linguistic-minded ones are thrilled by prospects of new German and advanced science courses which will be open to them. Indeed, the sophs have memorable moments—the over-lengthy book reports; raiding their mother's linen closets for sheets-into-togas for the pep parade; construction of the Christmas star for the roof. Study, yes . . . plenty of it, but along with it, fun.

Assembling ideas and arranging plans for class activities are jobs for the sophomore officers—Jan Hall, president; Gene Fake, treasurer; Floyd Warner, vice-president; and Janeen Taylor, secretary.

The first weeks of freshman life are filled with confusion, uneasiness and excitement, but soon this is transformed to adventuresome, happy school days with many new friendships and a new exciting social life. And so, the CLASS OF '62, realizing that they have much before them,

have planned their activities, the first being a get-acquainted session prior to the election of class officers. The next step up the ladder of events was the decoration of the athletic field for Parents Day under the guidance of these officers. Two weeks later they captured the junior high trophy for their outstanding float in the pep parade. Then in January they took time from their busy schedules to attend the first junior high dance. Later at the valentine dance sponsored by the class the Prince and Princess of Hearts were crowned amid hearts, flowers and lace. Meanwhile, athletically inclined members were making their presence felt on junior high squads. Holding their own scholastically, too, the freshmen can claim a full, happy year.

Full of vim and vigor are the young individuals making up our EIGHTH GRADE sections. Seeing them in action one is convinced that their motto is keeping things lively.

. . . and how they love to live up to that reputation! They're accustomed now to finding their way around after spending their first year in R. L. A. H. S., adjusting to new situations, participating in intramurals and assemblies, and receiving a small taste of new and interesting subjects. They like to show their big brother upperclassmen that they, too, can keep up when it comes to studies, and they do! The honor roll proves they are really trying. Putting their best foot forward in the line of activities, these cubs go to town. Like their junior high relatives, they took their turn at decorating the football field, have joined all clubs open to them, relish the opportunity to sponsor dances, yell at football and basketball games . . . and through it all, are having a wonderful year.

The hallway looks mighty inviting to Kenneth Sechrist and Sharon Smeltzer after a slippery, slushy hike to school. It takes a lot more than muggy weather, however, to daunt the spirits of eighth graders.

Curiosity and shyness accented the features of our seventh graders the first few days of school. However, soon smiles appeared as this small but mighty class took a foothold in the school activities. One first was being able to compete for the honor roll banner. Attending dances, preparing for pep parades, and joining clubs are just some of the doings they have entered into wholeheartedly. They also greatly enjoyed their decorating assignment at the football field. Sports activities are atttended faithfully by these students, who strengthen their lungs yelling proudly and loudly. After hopefully waiting for six years, this energetic group is in high school at last and the students are making the most of it, by attempting to mold their lives after the five higher classes. They are now willing to carry their responsibility in upholding our school codes, and are anxiously awaiting the consequences of the next five years. Until then they will remain just as they are—a peppy SEVENTH GRADE.

ORGANIZATIONS

All work and no play makes John P. Student a dull guy to have around, and so Red Lion aims to prevent this catastrophe by arranging for special activities. Some students have very unusual tastes, but there are clubs to cover almost any interest. There is journalism for the newshound . . . science for the guy who just can't get enough in class . . . dramatics for the stagestruck . . . band for those with the urge to toot . . . even chess is under consideration. Service clubs, recreation clubs, talent clubs—something for everyone. These are assets to any school. When we look back twenty years from now on our school days, we'll find that the organizations are a part of those carefree days that WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

A tuneful jam session . . . Gordon Spurley, Larry Smith, Eric Landis, Jim Clemens, and Bill DeShong make the music room echo with a stepped-up version of "Green Door."

One of the more pleasant duties of Student Council president, Stephany Smith, is welcoming guests to school assemblies. This time her greeting is directed to Dr. Campbell as he moves toward the speaker's rostrum.

Weekly meetings, special meetings, committee meetings . . . the STUDENT COUNCIL goes busily on its way serving R. L. A. H. S. Under the capable guidance of its officers, twenty eight strong, does a commendable job in clearing up problems which arise around the school. Representatives from each homeroom get together every other Tuesday and thrash out the school policies. This year the STUDENT COUNCIL put on a big clothing drive, collecting barrels of slightly used clothes for the underprivileged. The star on the school roof at Christmas and the other decorations are the results of this group's planning. With the help of the suggestion box, many improvements are made around school, such as the much-needed clock in the cafe, and starting of new clubs. But the work isn't all serious. The annual campaign for officers provides some of the most interesting moments of the year, with posters, speeches, and a hodgepodge of policies, platforms, and voters. The council sponsors special events, and in a variety of other ways helps to keep the school on its toes.

LIBRARY CLUB—Front: Helen Kline, Kay Smith, Susan Dettinger, Beverly Blouse, Treva Thoman, Jacqualine Runkle, Susan Sheckart, Janden Meyers, Susan Stump, Jane Shive, Alice Thompson. Second: Connie Hinkle, Amelia Taylor, Patricia Grove, Sally Smith, Natalie Keller, Vonnie Kramer, Loretta Keller, June Grove, Norma Braun, Ottilie Jones, Carol Barshinger. Third: Shelby Haugh, Treva Grim, Judy Tyson, Bernice Kornbau, Nina Hannigan, Diane Smith, Jane Poff, Marcia Seitz, Mary Raver, Toni Herman, Susan Watkins, Darlene Grim, Mary Ann Kohler, Hilda Kunkle.

Janden Meyers, Treva Thoman, and Vonnie Kramer are student librarians who have their hands full keeping books, books, and more books in order.

Ready, willing, and able to provide information to the average reader or researcher are the girls of the LIBRARY CLUB. Contrary to what some people may think, the club is not only a valuable aid to future librarians but also gives the other students a chance to gain a little further information on its inner workings for their own personal use. One of the principal aims of this organization is to provide a background on library work from its basic groundwork to the more technical skills involved in its operation. The nicest thing about the club is the fact that members not only learn the "business" but they also take charge in the library and help out Mrs. Shermeyer. The members are required to serve at least one period a week as assistant librarians and take care of discharging books and collecting money for overdue books. There are also king-size piles of volumes which need repairing and stacking.

But that's not all, for the books and magazines must be classified and prepared for use, an assembly planned and presented, plus a thousand and one other odd jobs.

A satisfying reward for their Hilltop writings . . . journalists celebrate with a picnic in the park. Seated: Brenda Graham, Nancy Paley, Elda Wilhelm, Sandra Henry, Sandra Deitz, Joanne Moulton. Standing: Bernice Kornbau, Joanne Hyson, Gladys Fleagle, Carolyn Hake, Joyce Dixon, Connie Horn, and their advisor, Miss Keeports.

Each month the HILLTOP STAFF rolls the presses and comes out with a new issue of our school paper, the Hilltop. Nor is this as simple as some might think. The staff must be on the job steadily, and it's a common thing to see a couple newshounds scrounging around, trying to get a story. These reporters of all grades are trained well in a club of their own, the JOURNALISM CLUB, and turn out snappy, complete articles. This year for the first time, several junior high writers were admitted into this group. The main job of the staff is of course, but the Hilltop has several pages on the lighter side—the feature pages with Trudy Truehart, romance expert; poems, puzzles, and little offbeat news items. Several reports are given on the athletic events in season and Fearless Forecasts are made concerning the teams' progress. All these with advertisements and pictures make up our Hilltop, one of the best school newspapers around. A great deal of work and much brain strain go into the job of getting each issue out on time.

Fond memories of school life are stored in Red Lion's yearbook, the LION. The staff members operate in their appropriately named headquarters, the activity office, where idle moments seldom occur. Planning the book and cutting and mounting snapshots is a big job done by the make-up committee, and the industry of the typists is shown to the world from the sounds of chattering typewriters. The photographers are found by their camera flashes, anywhere, anytime, and in various positions, attempting to catch a needed informal. Captions to be written, material to be checked, pictures to be identified and copy to be compiled are daily jobs handled by the editorial staff. Meanwhile those on the business end of the project take care of the details of their work—sales records, patron lists, and finances. Each committee is to meet those all-too-soon deadlines. But eventually the day comes when paper cutters are put away, typewriters are silent, and staff members relax in anticipation of the arrival of the completed project.

Co-editors Charles Daugherty and David Gable quietly negotiate some LION difficulties in a corner of the activity office, the home of the yearbook.

Mr. Shaffer points out good and bad points to his trusty photography staff—Barry Stell, James Clemens, Chester Wise, Robert Breckenridge, and John McKinley.

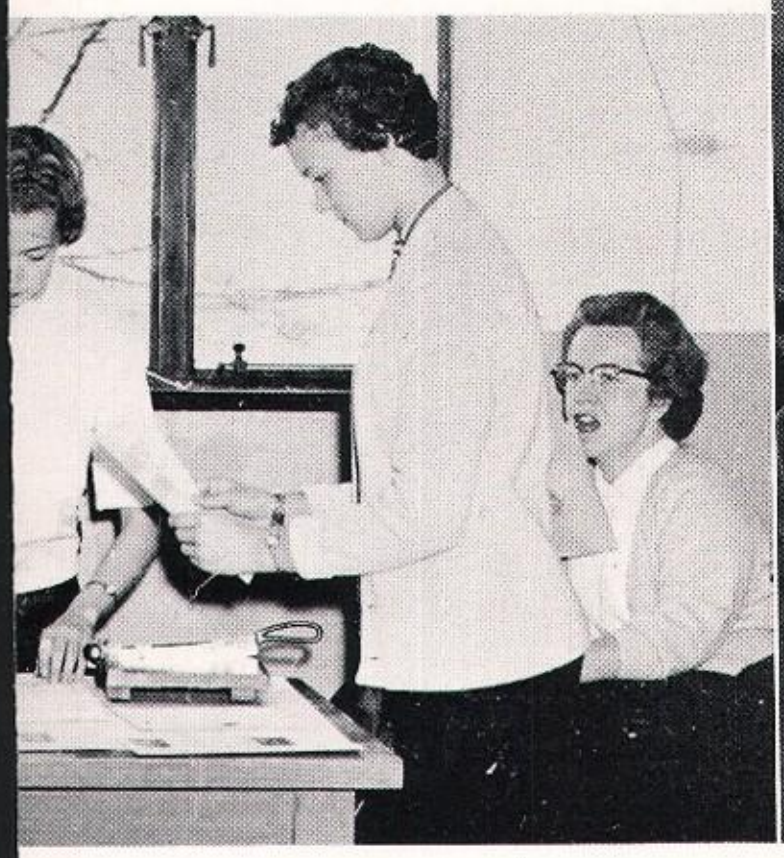
Precision and time are the prime qualifications of the make-up staff —Charles Daugherty, Joyce Dixon, Gladys Fleagle, Norma Mundis, and Sylvia Herbst with their advisor Miss Clevenger.

David Gable, second from right, gives assignments and suggestions to the editorial staff—Carolyn Hake, Dale Smith, Linda Gehr, Phyllis Ream, and Nancy Paley. This is a Tuesday morning ritual.

The business side of the yearbook, such as sales campaign and distribution of books, was efficiently handled by Sandra Henry, Donna Mundis, Barry Smeltzer, and Galen Baker, business manager.

Doubles, singles, carbons . . . everyday phrases to the ever-obliging LION typists—Amaryllis Gipe, Geraldine Rider, Brenda Grim, Alverta Hildebrand, and Joyce Snyder.

For this group work began in the spring of '58 and continued until the last page proof had been OK'd.



Each year the members of the JUNIOR RED CROSS COUNCIL, under the supervision of Miss Nonemaker, go about their work of lending a helping hand. Operating out of Room 102, the council supplies veterans and other patients in hospitals with Christmas favors and crossword puzzle cards which are made during the weekly meeting periods. Boxes are packed with small but useful articles and scrapbooks of school and community are prepared for use overseas. Their big financial job is the membership drive, conducted yearly on a homeroom basis. The rooms compete against each other to have all students join the Red Cross and chip in with a contribution.

The council gets together on alternate Thursday mornings to plan out its campaign of helping the needy.

Its membership consists of a male and a female representative chosen by each homeroom. They, in turn, through reports and magazines, see to it that their respective rooms remain alert to, and active in, the work of the Junior Red Cross.

Thomas Ziegler and Carolyn Strickler concentrate on packing articles in the boxes to be sent overseas.

There are many happenings around our school which are well worth remembering, and these happenings are best recorded on film. For this reason, one of the most active clubs in the school is the PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB. These denizens of the darkroom

and their very capable advisor, Mr. Shaffer, are very often seen prowling through the halls carrying one or more cameras, pockets bulging with flashbulbs, and their faces showing that look found only on the countenances of sharp-eyed shutter jockeys looking for an off-beat shot. Merely catching good pictures, however, is not the only function of the club. They also learn how to play, snap, and develop a picture properly and to take care of the cameras. The favorite haunt of these shutter-bugs is the darkroom, which is full of good photography equipment and supplies.

Using the experience which they gain in the club, some of the older members are chosen to serve as photographers on the staffs of the two school publications—the Hilltop and the LION.

Gary Wineholt patiently waits for his fellow club members, George Miller and Michael Kunkle, to get him centered and snap his picture.

Charles Elfner, Larry Moore, and Eric Landis of the stage crew get furniture in position for the actors to move in.

Handy men of the theatrical world . . . that's the stage crew. They may not always be visible but they're always on the job. There's evidence of their activity in Friday assemblies, class plays and other special productions on stage. A few of the members may sometimes be seen, darting modestly in and out of the curtains, placing or removing music stands, the speaker rostrum, chairs, tables, or some other props. Producing just the right effects and authentic-looking backgrounds for class plays are some of the most important and rewarding jobs facing the stage crew. They deserve a large portion of praise for their feverish work and emergency aid, without which class productions could be quite a problem. Not only must they set up scenery, but they must also master the complex lighting system and provide sound effects plus building and painting more scenery. They must also be fast on the draw, getting the curtain back and forth on cue. Mr. Landis, as stage crew director, supplies helpful hints at weekly meetings, which bring fruitful results for the men behind the scenes.

They may not be in the limelight but when the time comes for a school program, they can be counted on to be in the right place at the right moment.

For those having a flair for acting, the DRAMATIC CLUB offers opportunities. Besides presenting skits before the group, these thespians also stage assemblies. However, before they do, constructive criticism is given to the group and then there is practice, practice and more practice, primarily to scare away stage-fright and develop acting abilities. Plays, musical readings, singing, and pantomimes are other features presented by these theatrically-minded students. Equally important to acting is appearance, and so other skills are needed by this group. Behind the scenes are those who freely allot their time to grease paint and costumes.

The tedious jobs of make-up application and acquiring suitable clothing are also considered. Although merriment and enjoyable entertainment is the present goal, perhaps fame is on the way to some of the more devoted acting fans. Who knows? Maybe someday a former DRAMATIC CLUB member will be in Hollywood, with a star on his dressing room door.

Dance, ballerina, dance! Joyce Brenneman whirls around the floor at the senior high Christmas dance.

Jitterbug, waltz, mambo, rumba, cha-cha, stroll, and the samba. All are well-known to the DANCING CLUB, whose pep, and vim, and feminine charm add much to school programs. When the club meets every other Thursday the girls work hard trying to learn the newest dance craze sweeping the nation. Then, trying their hands at learning the newest steps, they put their talents to work under the guidance of the phys ed teachers. Assemblies are an ideal spot for their routines, and these visions of rhythm

invariably turn out a delightful performance. These energetic gals not only create a sensation by doing the newest kind of hop, but they create many routines themselves.

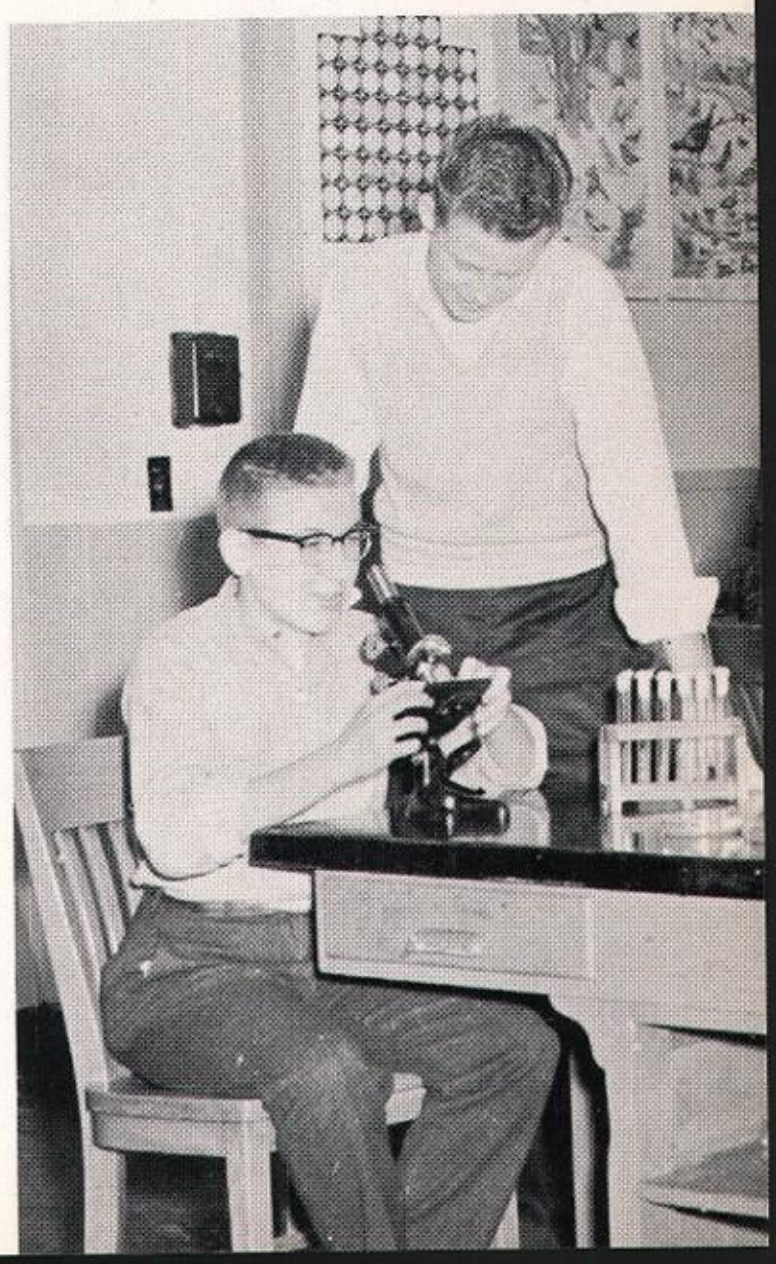
Microscopic techniques are demonstrated by Barry Lutz and Jeff Douglas as they experiment in Biology. Club.



The students of the BIOLOGY CLUB are the school's amateur animal surgeons and also proficient hikers. This may seem a weird combination but it is quite simple. They are amateur animal surgeons because they at many different times are wielding a scalpel

on frogs, worms, or a fish (dead, of course). The hiking part comes from the fact that they take field trips in order to collect plant life. And, too, tramping through such places as Longwood Garden, the Pennsylvania State Farm Show, the Washington Zoo, and the Smithsonian Institute makes these club members proficient hikers. These student naturalists are really interested in learning the numerous little facets of the science profession as applied to their own lives.

Today, in America, the watchword is "science." The Sputniks, Explorers, and Jupiter C's have drawn the interest of Americans to this field and a great amount of new enthusiasm has evolved. Red Lion High's students are no exception because throughout the school interest has increased and we now find ourselves with no less than three SCIENCE CLUBS. These three, however, may be grouped together into two, the junior and the senior science clubs. Both clubs in the course of their discussions cover a variety including anything from hydrogen to hay infusions. Most of the materials, equipment, and chemicals which the clubs use come from the chemistry lab which, at nearly any time of the day, may be seen to contain a group of the

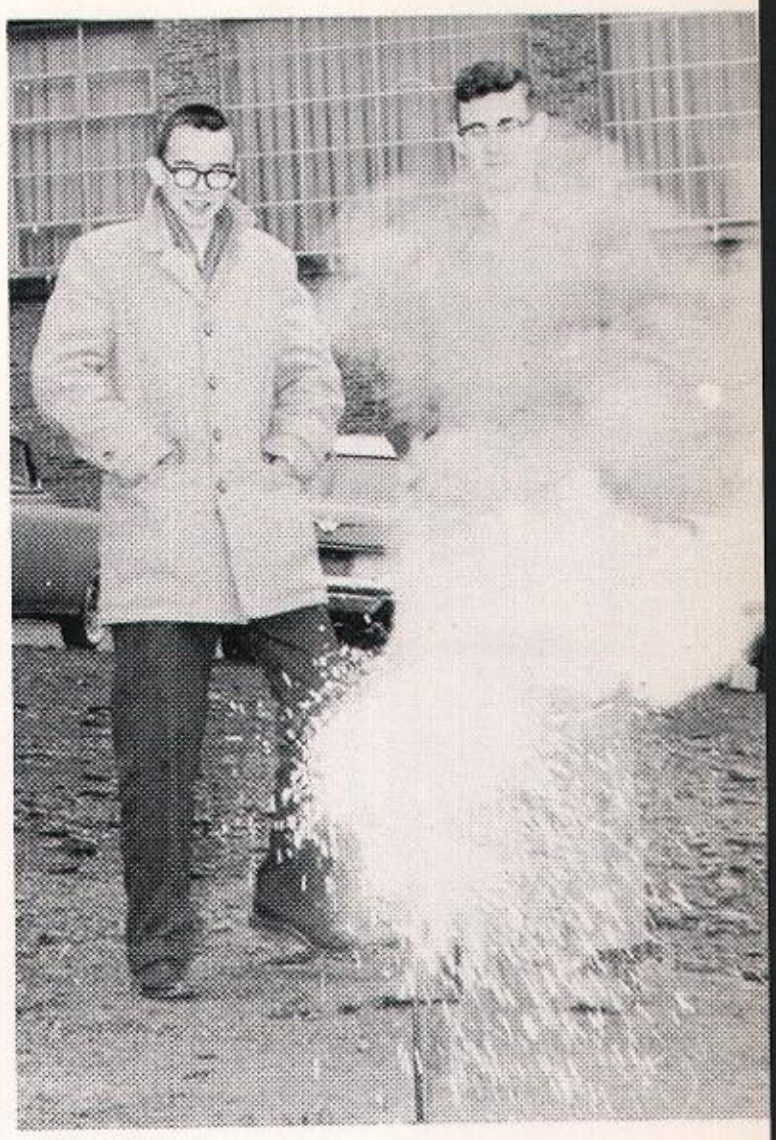
who are either conducting an experiment of their own or intently watching the results of another's experiment. This quality of inquisitiveness, successfully taught by our SCIENCE CLUBS, is the heart of science.



Wait! Don't call the fire company. Eric Smith and Tom Ziegler have everything under control and that blinding flash is only the workings of a thermite reaction prepared by the Senior Science Club.

Among the clubs that R. L. A. H. S. sponsors for its students there is one of particular interest to girls who plan after graduation to go into the nursing field of work. For those Florence Nightingales of tomorrow, the FUTURE NURSES CLUB is an ideal spot to pick up information that will be of use later on. The club is under the guidance of Mrs. Strayer, the school nurse. Besides taking temperatures and pulses, these gals are bandaging experts, and when it comes to making hospital beds, well, their corners are turned almost perfectly. Each week members of the club take over the meeting and present the program. There are interesting possibilities for such meetings and the girls get a kick out of showing films and slides, or perhaps carrying on a panel discussion. To add a bit of variety to the program, they invite speakers from hospitals and schools of nursing. This organization has activities planned throughout the year, and the girls pick up many tricks of the trade.

Learning the proper way of making an occupied bed is essential for would-be nurses. Nancy Newcomer demonstrates this process with the help of a willing but sick friend.

The F.F.A. operates almost parallel to the agriculture class, except that is a more active group, concerned with activities other than farming. Animals, vegetable displays, and exhibits are entered in the York Fair each year, resulting in some proud possessors of blue ribbons. Each winter there is a bus trip to the farm show in Harrisburg. Conventions and conferences, headed by agricultural experts, introduce modern farming techniques to these students of the soil.

Improved and newer ideas are tested, sometimes with amazing results. This group also conducts activities with the Lower Chanceford F.F.A. These joint programs prove invaluable to both. The county meet and the track meets with the F.F.A. chapters are scheduled to fit into a well-planned outline. They also decorate a float for the pep parade, with one of the boys in the pilot's seat of the tractor pulling it. This group has a reputation for entering wholeheartedly into projects, both recreational and educational.

A sister to the home economics department is the F.H.A., technically the FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA. This year membership in the organization skyrocketed so that the club was divided into two groups meeting on separate days. At these weekly meetings the information acquired in home ec class is put to use in discussions led by Mrs. Laucks, the motive power behind the group. Domestic inclinations and a desire for the companionship of other females are the only joining requirements. F.H.A. girls are not always occupied as

They are called on to serve at the football and other banquets, consequently their discussions of etiquette and proper serving tactics come in pretty handy. The girls always look forward to the trips downtown. The fashion-conscious especially enjoy the tour of Teena's dress shop. Another excursion on the agenda is the visit to Hanna's where they find that the dry cleaning process is not dry at all. Back to school again, projects in knitting, embroidering, weaving or stencilling are carried out, accompanied by a little fun and much amicable chatter.

Modeling their original Easter bonnets, these F.H.A. members—Norma Braun, Janice Kashner, Alverta Hildebrand, Barbara Hershner, Judy Knaub—pose for photographers.

Agility and a sense of balance are needed by the members of the TUMBLING CLUB, who really roll it up during their practice periods. Even the bumps are enjoyed by the boys when they get together. The basic techniques are forward rolls, hand springs, and head stands, from which more complex methods are derived. For those who enjoy heights and read Tarzan, rope climbing is a favorite. The trampoline especially is popular with these equilibrant club members, who are found in the gym with either end up, perfecting their tumbling skills. These musclemen entertain on Orientation Day and at basketball games, but their big chance to shine is at the spring gym review. Here they flip, twist, and jump to the applause of a thrilled audience, and present their specialty, the pyramid.

Whether in the gym or in the jungle, these two Tumbling Club members, Barry Smeltzer and Dale Smith, are at home. Their agility on the climbing ropes is slightly reminiscent of Tarzan and his simian friends.

The VARSITY CLUB is the male athletic organization of this school and is composed of over twenty athletes. The club has weekly meetings under the supervision of Mr. Fitzkee and Mr. Shellenberger. One of the most important things under discussion is sports' techniques. They desire greatly to improve these since they are all athletes, and as members of the club are wearers of a varsity letter in one of the major sports. At the meetings they see films of pro games of different sports and athletic training. The main purpose of the club, however, is to promote sportsmanship and attendance at athletic events. They provide usher service and score cards for basketball games and help out generally to make the school athletic program a success.

A basketball fan, Ronald Robinson, eagerly reaches for a program which James Snyder holds. These programs are issued by the Varsity Club, which Jim is representing.

William DeShong and George Miller are tuning up their instruments with their accompanist, David Hively, hitting the pitch keys on the piano.

Not quite as large as the marching band but just as important is the ORCHESTRA. Although it isn't quite as well known around the school, it has several important obligations to fill. Like the other instrumental organizations around R. L. A. H. S. the ORCHESTRA operates under the baton of Mr. Ward. Each Tuesday morning it rehearses and the occupants of the near-by rooms are soothed by the sound of singing strings.

This group differs from the band in that it has several types of stringed instruments and is much smaller than the band. With the better players in the school as members, the ORCHESTRA plays mostly classical numbers. It performs at school functions at various times throughout the year, with a few numbers at the music assembly and the Night of Music. Its big chance, however, comes at the end of the year when, after much precise practice, it provides the music for the Commencement activities.

Plumes flying gayly in the breeze, the flags of the color guard unfurled, the stirring sounds of the drums and the crash of cymbals make up the color and glamor of the marching BAND. Shortly after school is resumed in September, melodious sounds are heard from outside the school as the band members, under the direction of Mr. Ward, iron out those few sour notes for a perfect performance.

From basses to piccolos, this organization has them all! Soft and low, loud and strong, the BAND strives to give a good showing. During the football season it is a major attraction. Appearances are made at other times, too . . . the annual Night of Music, the music assembly, the town Christmas parade, and the spring park concert.

Charles Elfner, Darryl Emenheiser, Russell Schaeberle and Richard Jacobs seem to have that patriotic feeling as they represent "The Spirit of '76" on Veterans Day.

The vanguard of the band . . . the quick-stepping color guard and the nine strutting majorettes catch the admiring glances of the crowds when they come marching onto the field. They are experts at decorating band parades, and they glory in it. Something new was added this year to the original all-boy color guard . . . girls! Now it totals four guys and four gals. Holding their heads high and trying hard to keep in step, they are ever alert to the director's whistle for the band to move on. Head majorette LaDawn Fix and her gang practice hard and long to whip routines into shape. Whether doing a dance step, or twirling lighted batons at night games, they are bound to receive a cheer from the fans.

Music is a desired form of entertainment for many activities and social gatherings; R. L. A. H. S. has a supply that will satisfy all tastes. To provide music for Friday assemblies there are the musicians known as the ASSEMBLY BAND. Their rousing marches not only create atmosphere for the affair, but quicken the steps of students filing in and out of the auditorium. Their reward—front row seats for all productions on stage. Several of these bandsmen are also past masters in the characteristic of the DANCE BAND. Here they specialize in mood music for romantics who like soft lights and heavenly melodies, but they can also play a "rocking" tune for those who like jumpin' sounds. And finally, there is the JUNIOR BAND whose young players practice with an eye to gaining the status of membership in one of the senior groups.

Musicians of the Assembly Band await the signal from the baton of Mr. Ward before giving out with some lively ditty for Friday's assembly.

Red Lion is one of those schools which are blessed with several choruses. Opportunities for participation are made available to these interested students who have singing talent and time to spend practicing.

The school songbirds start their musical training in junior high under Mr. Goodman. Here they learn the fundamentals and get their first chances to perform. Then come the senior high groups, three in number, directed by Mrs. Adams. The MIXED CHORUS combines the boys' deeper voices with the girls' to produce some pleasant sound effects. This group, together with the band, presents the Night of Music finale, a musical thrill for any audience. The GIRLS CHORUS, usually quite large, specializes in the lighter songs. The GIRLS ENSEMBLE is a much smaller organization and sings some more advanced music. This group competes in the annual forensics.

Red noses and frost-bitten toes don't seem to bother this jolly group of carolers—Dee Koch, Charles Daugherty, Dianne Paules, Donald Detwiler. They picked one of the winter's coldest nights!

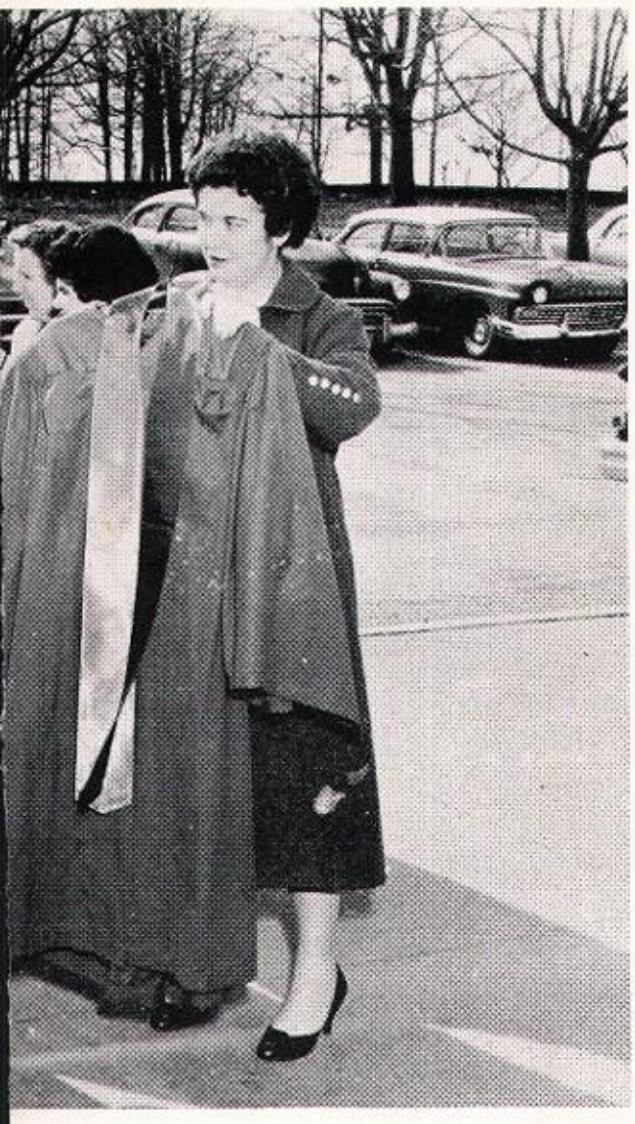
LATIN HONOR SOCIETY – Ray Kornbau, Lona Grim, David Hively, Stephany Smith, Faye Miller, Brenda Reisinger, Dale Uhler, Joyce Dixon, Brenda Graham.



Outstanding are those industrious individuals who have earned membership in one of the honor societies. There is the National Athletic Scholarship Society for those boys who have combined brains and brawn . . . at present, ten seniors and six juniors qualify. The Latin Honor Society takes second semester sophomores capable of mastering the Latin language and efficiently escorting Caesar through the Gallic Wars . . . this group's in-school roster numbers nine. Then there is the highly regal National Honor Society which is made up of the elite of the students.

For this, juniors and seniors are chosen on the basis of citizenship, leadership, character, and scholastic achievement. Eleven of the class of '59 became members during their junior year; this year thirteen more were added, together with fourteen from the class of '60. Membership in these honor societies is a highly coveted goal, and is quite a payoff for the midnight oil that was burned and the hours of concentration in school.

Members of the National Honor Society, with all their paraphernalia, leave for Eastern High to establish a chapter and initiate members . . . Charles Daugherty, Joyce Dixon, Carolyn Hake, Sylvia Herbst, Mrs. Bowers, Brenda Graham, Joyce Snyder.

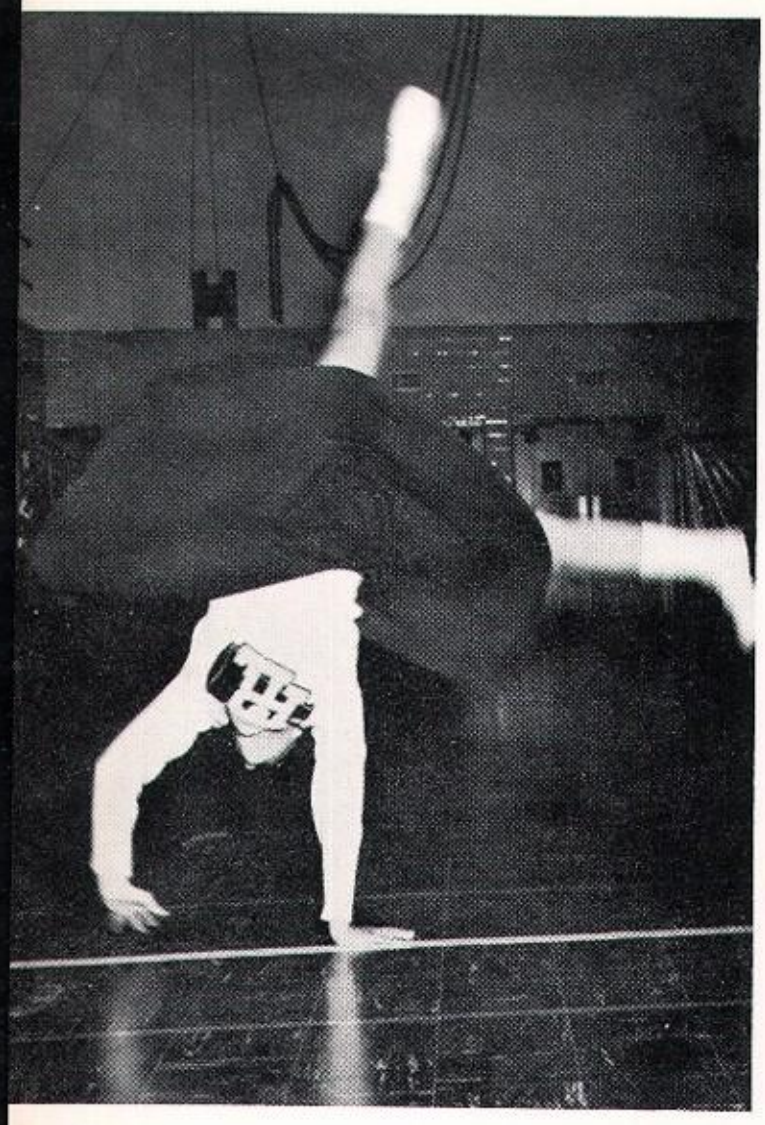
SPORTS

Our alma mater not only has a high standing in scholarship and affairs of the mind, but is also rated well in the department of brawn. Our studious scholars turn out for the sports events, not just as spectators, either. As a general thing Red Lion comes out among the best in league competition. Naturally, you can't win all the time but we do our share. All things considered, the football team did well. The baseball team won the championship and the basketball team looked sharp. When sports activities are mentioned, boys come to mind, but Red Lion girls do well, too—in their own class, of course. Our sporting activities are an extra-curricular part of high school that WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

Putting his back into it, Gilbert Smith hurls the shotput as hard and far as he can during the Susquehannock track meet. Mr. Hangen is on hand to tally the results of the throws. The meet resulted in another R.L.A.H.S. victory.



When the subject of CHEERLEADERS comes up, the picture that flashes into mind is that of a lithe, peppy gal bubbling over with enthusiasm. Red Lion CHEERLEADERS are no exception. Whether they're at football games, basketball games, or pep rallies, they are cheering with all the volume that they can muster (which by the way, is quite a bit). The junior high squad cheers their classmates in junior high on to victory at the basketball games. These seven girls are apprentices at the job. Next in line comes the J. V. squad. These seven jumping-jacks practice their

cartwheels and kicks

at the reserve games and look forward to filling a place on the varsity squad. The varsity! . . . the ultimate goal of CHEERLEADERS. This past year Red Lion was blessed with a top-notch baseball team. The Southern Division of the league presents a rough schedule for any team, but Red Lion, under Mr. Fitzkee, combined senior and sophomore talent to take the division championship, and lose only two regular season games in the process. Russ Urey, the star pitcher, even threw a no-hitter, the first one a Red Lion team has had in quite some time. The school turned out well to the old ball game

when the team went in to the Small Athletic Field to play for the league championship with the Northern winners, the Manchester Bobcats. The Bobcat team proved to be a little too much for the Lions, however, but, taken altogether, Red Lion had a good season. For a game like BASEBALL there is a good bit of practice involved. Our team was out throwing balls before the winter snows were gone, but a look at the scoring column shows it paid off. Here's an interesting sidelight—attendance at the games, for one reason or another, was made up mostly of girlfriends of the players and interested parents.

The final business of the baseball season is being completed as Coach Fitzkee awards letters and certificates to our Southern Division champions at the end of the class day assembly.

Lonnie Barnhart is safe beyond question as he slides into home during the Manchester game. The game was played between Red Lion and Manchester to decide the league championship. It took place at the Small Athletic Field in York and was won by the Bobcats.

It's the wind-up and the pitch . . . Harry Lohss, sophomore pitcher, gets set to burn one down the middle. Red Lion had a great pitching staff this past year.

Another run is chalked up as Lonnie Barnhart crosses the plate, safe by a mile. This took place during the Kennard-Dale game, which Red Lion won.

The pitch is a high, hard one and impossible to hit. Bob Shaull disdainfully waits for the next one as the catcher jumps, trying to get up in the air far enough to grab the ball.

Among the minor sports of the school is the exciting game of VOLLEYBALL. This game, though not as popular as some of the others, is very entertaining and requires a great amount of skill and teamwork. The object of the game is to get a soft leather-covered inflated sphere to go up and over the net

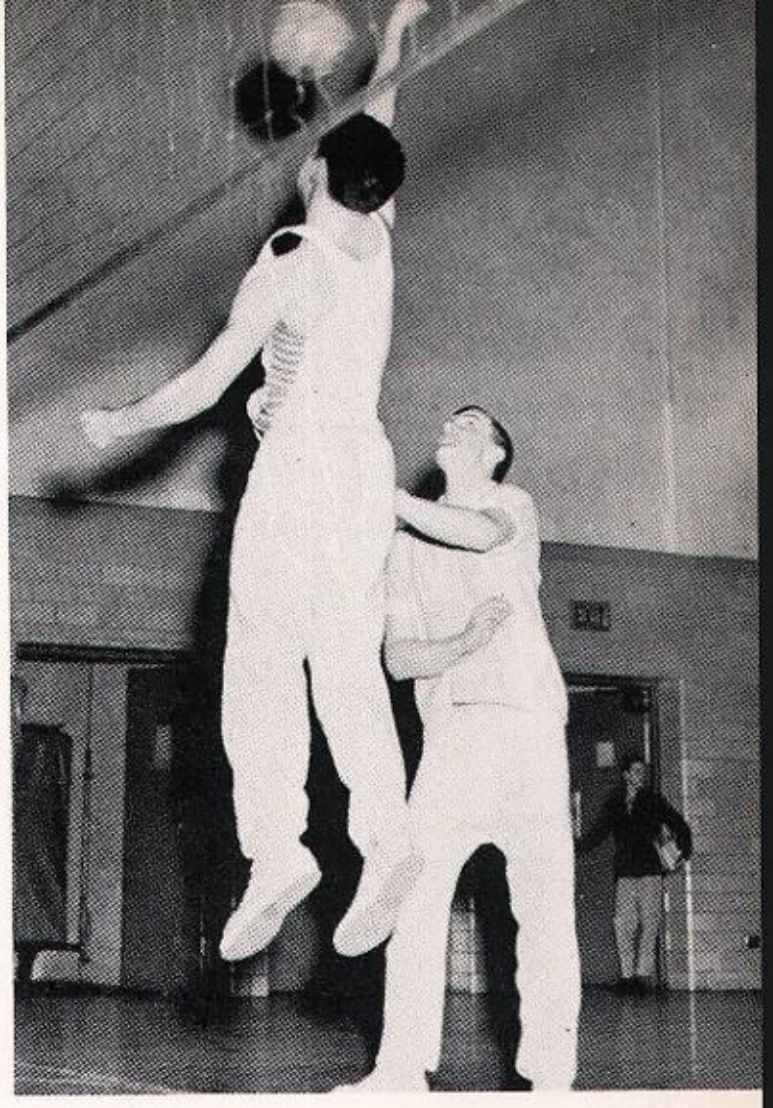
without touching the floor, also to volley that ball over the net in such a way that the opposing team can't return it. Because there is no organized volleyball league in the vicinity, there are no scheduled games but each spring district-wide competition is held at the York Junior College. This tournament is always highly competitive with many teams on hand. Last year, Red Lion's team lost to the Mount Penn team in the semifinals and ended up in fourth place when the final results were posted.



Cleon Spence is about to burn one back over the net during a volleyball practice on our court. Bill Grove provides moral support.

What a blast! Dale Smith takes a wicked cut at the ball, trying to get it out of the sand at the Red Lion Country Club.

Another minor sport at R. L. A. H. S., but one enjoyed thoroughly by the participants, is GOLF. The team usually consists of about ten boys and their able coach, Mr. Nitchkey. Since the season for GOLF is spring, it is not at all unusual to find a couple of eager souls playing before the last traces of the winter snow have vanished. There is no organized schedule but the team plays with several nearby schools. Home matches are played on the Red Lion Country Club course. A constant in the schedule, however, is the hotly contested student-faculty match. During last year's momentous match, Mr. Nitchkey lost his famed "lucky ball." This must have had a psychological effect on the whole faculty team because they suffered a handy defeat.

some king-size croquet

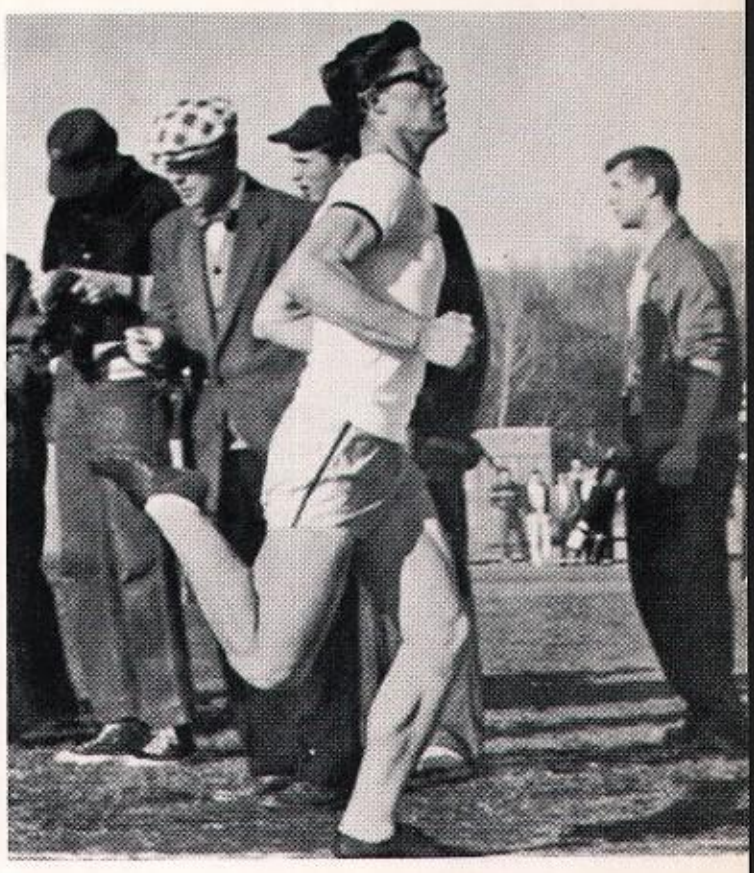
Yearly, our school fields three separate teams—the varsity or boys track team, the girls track team, and the junior high boys track team. The varsity team, however, is the unit which participates most in organized competition. These boys may be seen almost any week night

burning up the cinders

on our track course. In addition to the running sports which usually come to mind when TRACK is mentioned, there are the field contests, notably the shot put, the high jump, the discus throw and the broad jump.

Although the '58 team was not in the running for the county championship, their hard work paid off and during the season they took several of the regular meets. A school record was even broken by Ken Shumaker, Red Lion's ace miler.



This is no photo finish! There is no doubt that Lonnie Barnhart leads the field as he flashes past the line during a practice session on our field. The event was the 100-yard dash.

The fact that the bar keeps getting higher doesn't seem to bother Charles Workinger. In his enthusiasm he frequently misses even Red Lion's big, soft pit; one hard landing knocked the wind out of him.

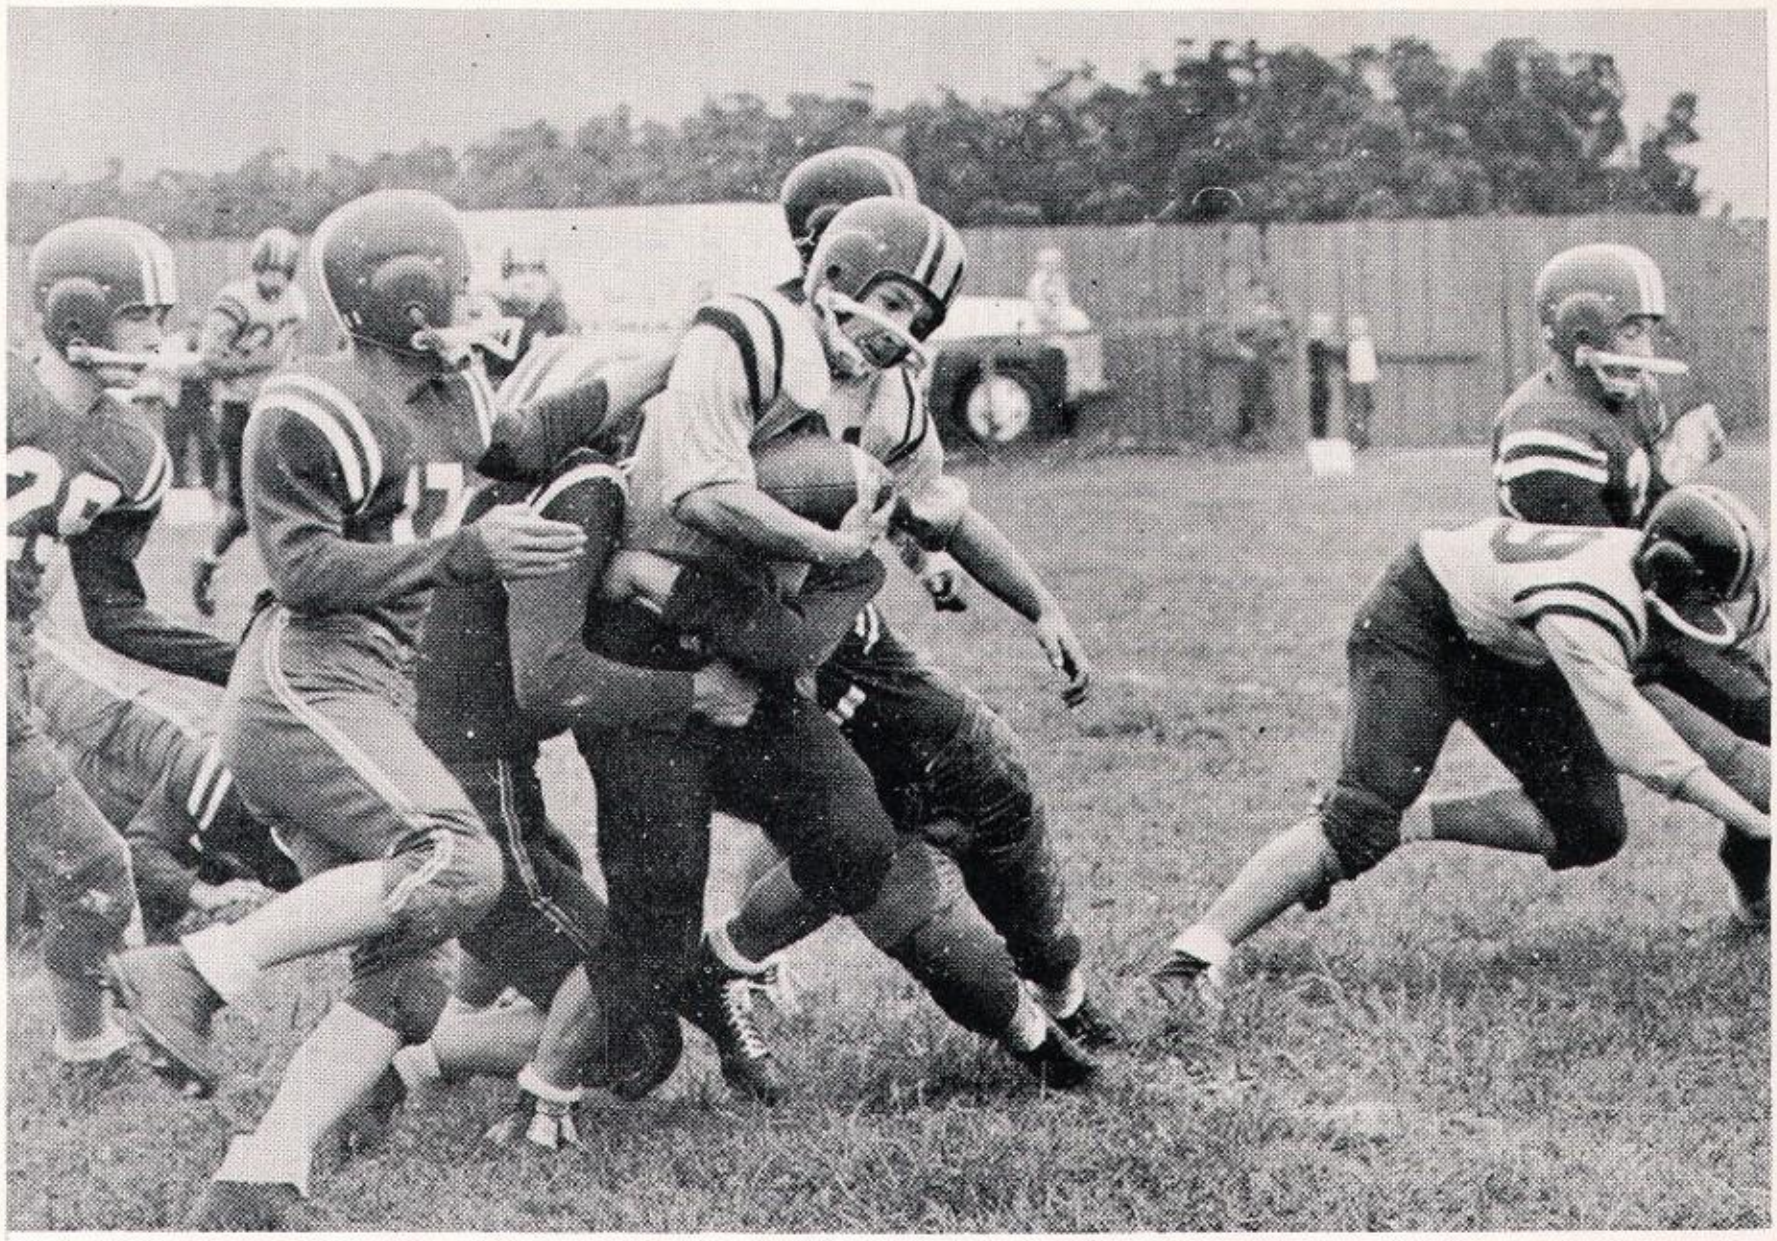
It's a fumble! And it looks like Barry Smeltzer is about to recover the ball for the Lions. According to the records, the try was successful and Red Lion wound up with the ball.



It looks as if slippery Gary Frey has come to the end of a run. These junior varsity games provided almost as much excitement as the varsity matches.

This year an unpredictable but always interesting Red Lion Area High football team fought its way through the busiest season of football (experience-wise), that any team could have. The Lions seemed to be a hard luck team. In no game throughout the season were they beaten by more than fourteen points, but the other teams always seemed to have the plurality when the final gun sounded. A sterling example of this is the Solanco game in which we played the Golden Mules to a deadlock throughout the contest until the waning minutes of the final quarter when they got a safety. This proved to be the deciding score of the game, the final score being Solanco—2, Red Lion—0. Although these misfortunes had a bad effect on the won-lost record of the season, (it was a 3-7 season), good experience was gained by those who in the future will be galloping on the gridiron.

A new innovation in the football training program this year was the training camp, sponsored by the Booster Club, and held at Camp Minqua. It was here that the team sweated, ate, and lived for one week in August. The idea proved to be very successful and much was gained by this intensive training.

Although Red Lion backfield man Dick Stein has been tackled by the West York player, he seems to have come out on top. The run set up one of the touchdowns in the West York game.

There must have been a slight mistake in blocking assignments because Dick Stein doesn't seem to be making much progress. That's the way football goes; every play can't be a touchdown.

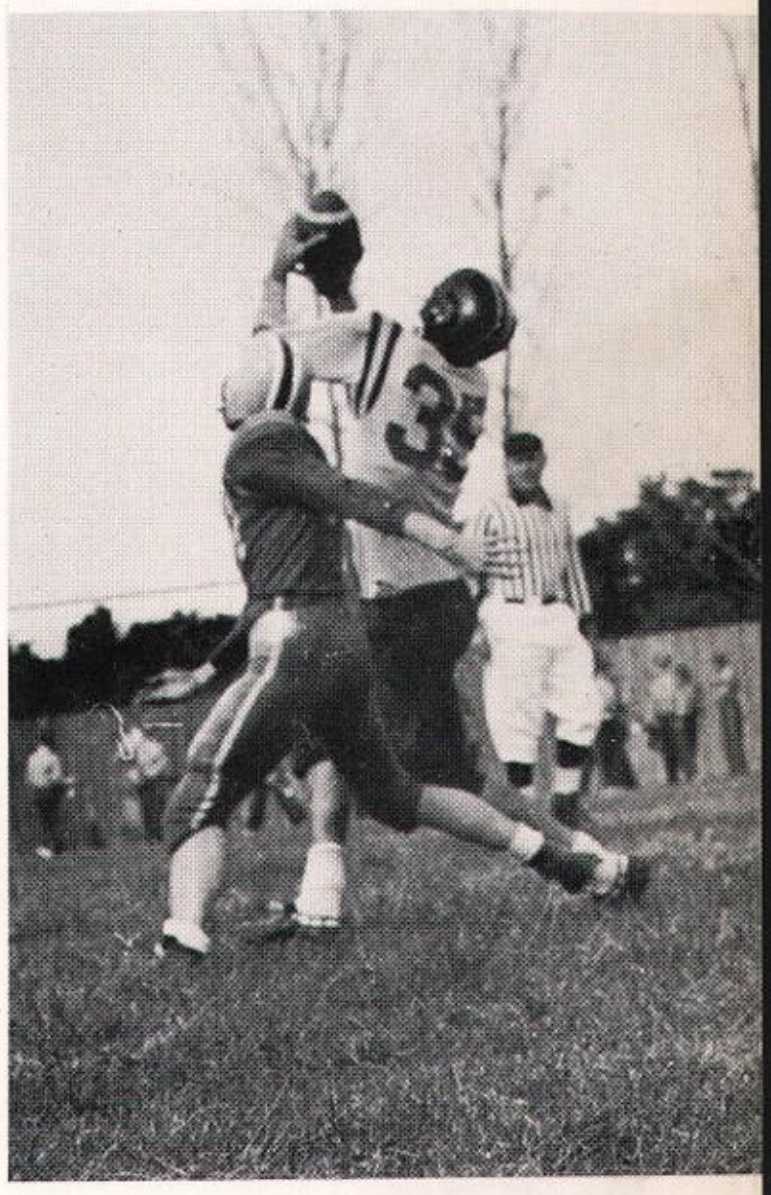
The junior high football team is nearly always the largest squad in the school. This year Mr. Heyne made the most of the talent present and welded together a team that was unbeaten and tied once. It was a big squad and had some big players on it. This team plays about four or five games each year and a great deal of enthusiasm is always generated as these junior gallopers scrap and fight toward that all-important goal line.

The junior high team also are very important to the coaches of the other teams, because in this way the boys gain a large amount of invaluable experience which will be important to them later if and when they make the varsity squad.



Tom Melhorn hauls down a high one during the Ephrata game. Tom really had need of his height to get some of those passes.

The 1958–1959 Varsity Basketball team at Red Lion Area High was extremely successful. Their season tally of eleven wins and four losses was good enough to get second place even in our division, which is a tough one. We were tied for first, but eliminated in the playoffs. The team, itself, had all the assets of a good basketball club. They had three men who were at least 6′ 4″ in height; they had the smaller, fast playmakers who make the whole attack click; and they had, most important, the spirit and the desire to win. All these qualities rolled into one made possible the shots and points

and the wins which made the season successful.

The schedule for the year was a hard one and one in which upsets were not the exception, but the rule. Our team, too, had it's share of hard luck games. Two of these, the Eastern and Northeastern games, were lost in the last five seconds by the Lions. The Lions' high scorer for the season was their ace center and their captain, Tom Melhorn. He also ended up with the best shooting percentage of the team.

There is something up there intensely interesting—another of Tom Melhorn's deadly spinning shots.

Charles Workinger goes in for a lay-up. Charlie had some twisting shots from underneath the basket that seemed to jump through the hoop.

The junior varsity and the junior high teams at R. L. A. H. S. both proved to be fine units in this year's basketball competition. From their records, they will be producing excellent material for future varsity teams. The junior high team showed that they had learned more than just dribbling and passing and basic fundamentals of the game by turning in a very good record of nine wins and six losses; the junior varsity also demonstrated their ability by beating nearly all the teams in the highly competitive JV league at least once. The season record for the junior Lions was thirteen wins and eight losses. They also provided invaluable assistance by practicing with the varsity team and it was their hard work that helped the senior Lions to attain such a fine season. Not a small part of the credit, too, must go to the fine coaches of these teams—junior high, Mr. Maddox; and junior varsity, Mr. Shellenberger.

Noon-time intramural contests are quite popular, especially for those who eat in the cafeteria. These games give students not on the school teams a chance to participate in the sports life of Red Lion High. Because of lunch time G.A.A. contests only junior high girls have been included in this year's intramurals. Games are set up and supervised by students and gym teachers. Lucky people with a free no-meeting noon hour enjoy this hot noon-time competition

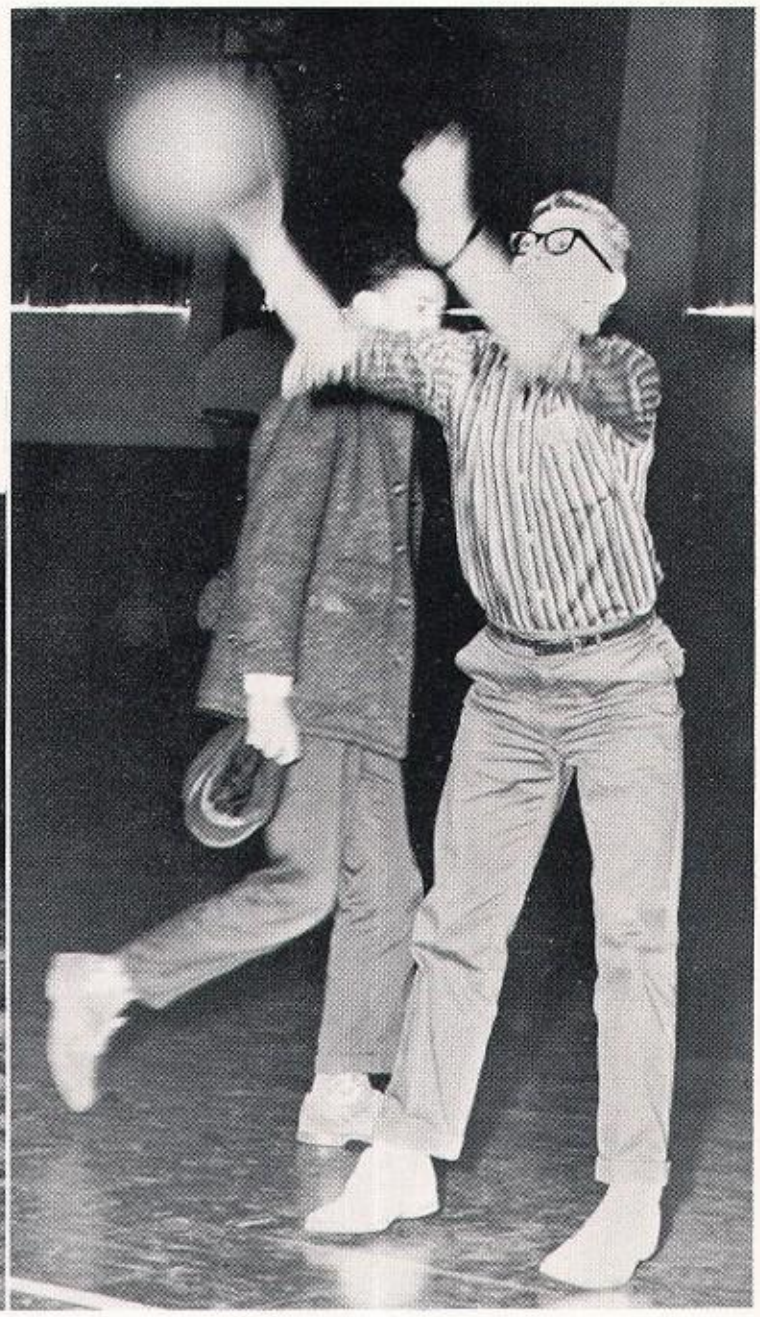
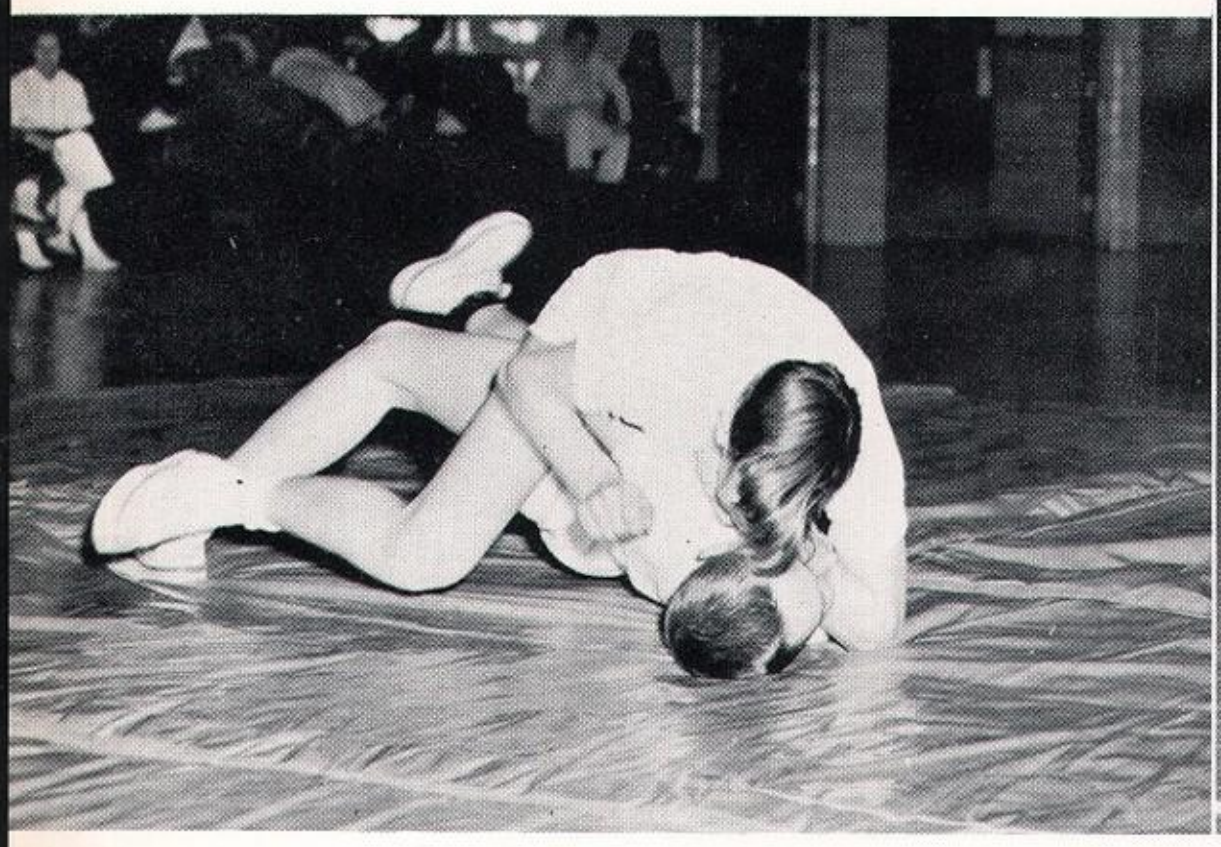
as spectators or participants.

Activities differ somewhat for girls and boys. The boys usually start the year with flag football; the girls with wiffleball. As winter comes, both groups go inside for basketball. Play-offs always draw a big crowd. With spring comes volleyball for both, providing lots of action, and then as the weather gets warmer, both go outside for the softball season. In addition, there are a few miscellaneous activities . . . foul shooting, rope climbing, wrestling, horseshoes, and tennis.

The opening moments of the intramural basketball championship game. . . . David Gable and Oran Stewart go up in the air for the jump.



Below: An exhibition of thrills and spills . . . the intramural wrestling, whether flyweight or heavyweight, provided entertainment for noon-time crowds. Right: Foul-shooting—something in which all can participate. Here Donald Stephens leans into one of his twenty-one allotted shots.



For the girls of senior high, the G. A. A. offers plenty of opportunity in sports and sport-related events. These athletes of the weaker sex

sponsor the football dance and referee the girls' noontime activities. At the basketball games they are found behind the refreshment stand or perched against some doorway taking tickets. For their own competitive games, moved this year to noontime, the officers and advisors draw up the various teams. Wiffleball games start the season off with a bang. There is just enough uncertainty about the ball's path to keep things interesting. When basketball season rolls around, the girls show the boys that they also can shoot fouls and make baskets. Then comes volleyball, and soon spring time brings softball. These activities, in addition to being fun, are also points toward an "RL."

Referee Fix pitches the ball in the air and steps back quickly, for Nancy Grove and Carolyn Lutz are leaping high, both striving for that extra inch of altitude necessary to tip the ball.

SPECIAL EVENTS

There are certain happenings that will stand out in our school lives, events that have a special significance for some or all of us. The first date at the big dance, a part in the class play, the pep rallies at the Square . . . all are things that will be remembered for a long time. It is these particular events that relieve the general routine of school life and give the student a pleasant change. Such activities tend to bring out a certain amount of school spirit and are a pretty good gauge of the morale of the student body. Years from now, as we think over our school days, there will be many special events that WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

Behind the scenes, prior to the senior play, the make-up staff laboriously paints and powders the cast members. Mary Beth Flinchbaugh, Bob Breckinridge and Mrs. Bowers attack their tasks energetically; however, Amaryllis Gipe grins wholeheartedly, thankful of a chance to relax.

Friday mornings around school are never dull, due mainly to one thing—assembly. Everyone has a chance to participate, because clubs, classes, and musical organizations all get into the act. Consequently, to the delight of all, offers anything from a colorful skit to an awards program. Early in the fall there are special assemblies by the Hilltop and Lion staffs to promote the school paper and yearbook; later, juniors and seniors advertise their plays. Student Council uses one Friday period for campaign speeches; the National Honor Society, for installation of new members. As for clubs, the Dramatic Club and Dancing Club members have lots of practice, so they're usually called on more than once; likewise the music groups. Social studies take over the election time slot, and the ag and commercial students combine fun and information in their fields. Spring time comes around and so do the awards assemblies with letters given for sports and music.

For Christmas, holiday customs of foreign lands. The Mexican scene, enacted by a freshman group (Mary Ann Hangen and Evans Snyder in foreground), comes to a close with the breaking of the "pinata" and the scrambling for candy and presents.

Mary Raver gives her version of a model telephone conversation and Elaine Eberly manipulates the switchboard. This was just one of the skits presented by the commercial sections during their assembly.

From the teeterboard to the shoulders of his pal, a member of the Taflin Trio performs a well-executed back-flip.

Frequently artists from near and far come to share talents ranging from the teeterboard tricks of the acrobatic Taflin Trio, to the witty comedy, "The Boor," presented by Rai and Lucille Baillie of the Baillie Theatre Lab. There were scientific marvels of light, sound, and outer space featured by General Electric in "The House of Magic"; also an educational experiment on the wonders of "Liquid Air" by John Sloan. In the field of music, the Orems displayed their skill in "Marimba Echoes"; Donald Warner presented popular and classical numbers on his organ. In addition, there is a serious side to these guest performances.

From Rev. Ernest Campbell of York the student listeners received an inspirational boost; from Professor Francis Reinberger, a thoughtful discourse on "Young People's Relationships"; and from Rev. Henry Richwine, some realistic pointers on better appearance of students. Small wonder that students look forward to these Friday assembly periods!

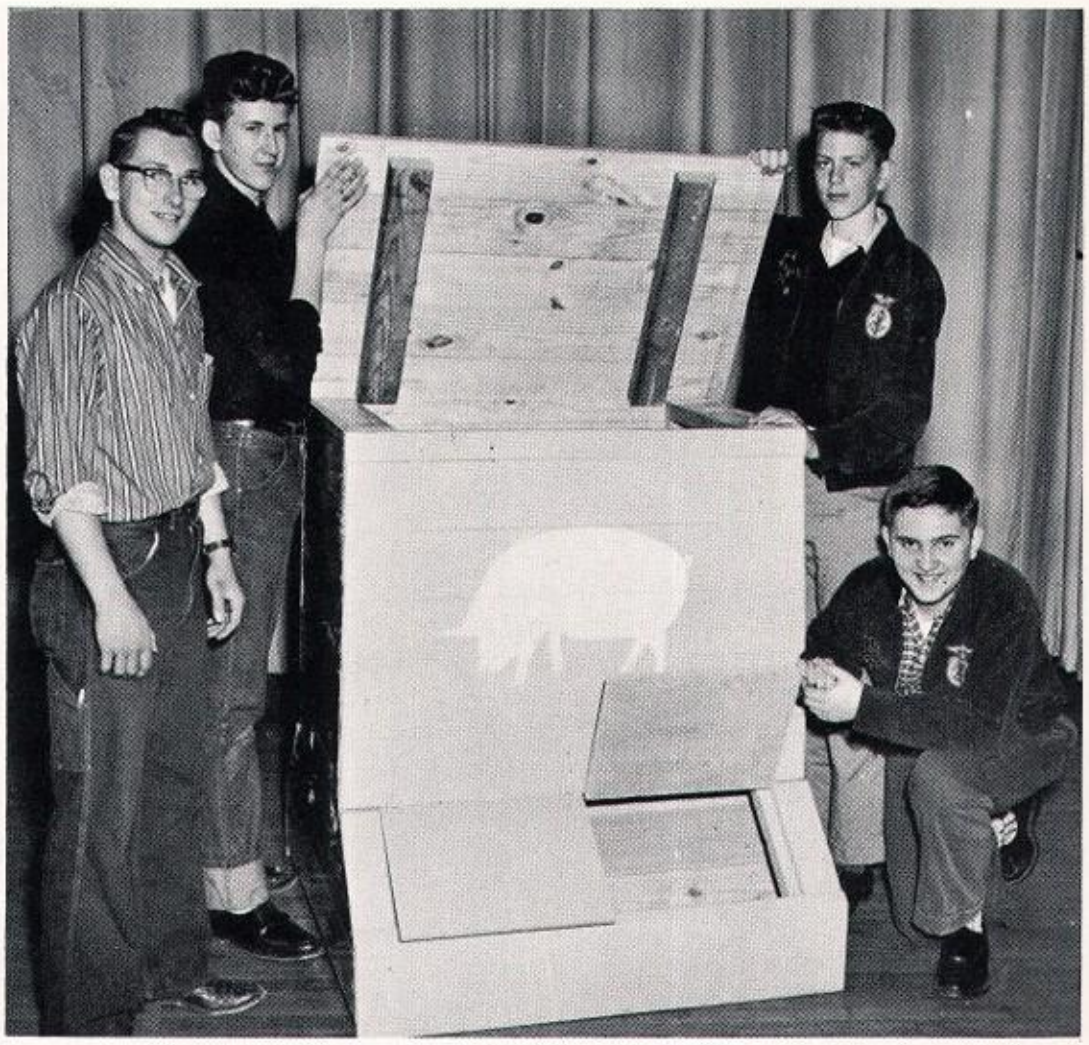
One of the top project exhibits displayed at the third annual F. F. A. Parents Night held April 1, 1958 in our school cafeteria was a hog feeder, made by Gerald Robinson. It is proudly shown by Gerald Keeny, Gerald Robinson, Jack Rehmeyer, and Barry Flinchbaugh.



A phase of the art exhibit is being inspected by Mr. Sample and his two very interested sons. Also on display were oil paintings, finger paintings, etchings, water colorings and leatherwork.

For the benefit of interested parents and friends, two special spring exhibits are scheduled—one in art, the other in ag. The '58 Parents' Night, sponsored by the F.F.A. was held early in April. It featured displays showing the students' newfound knowledge of raising prize-winning swine, poultry, and beef; also the know-how for a smooth running farm. After viewing the exhibits and listening to various explanations dealing with club work, parents were treated to refreshments and entertainment. A couple weeks later came the Art Exhibit, the other big event providing exhibits of talent.

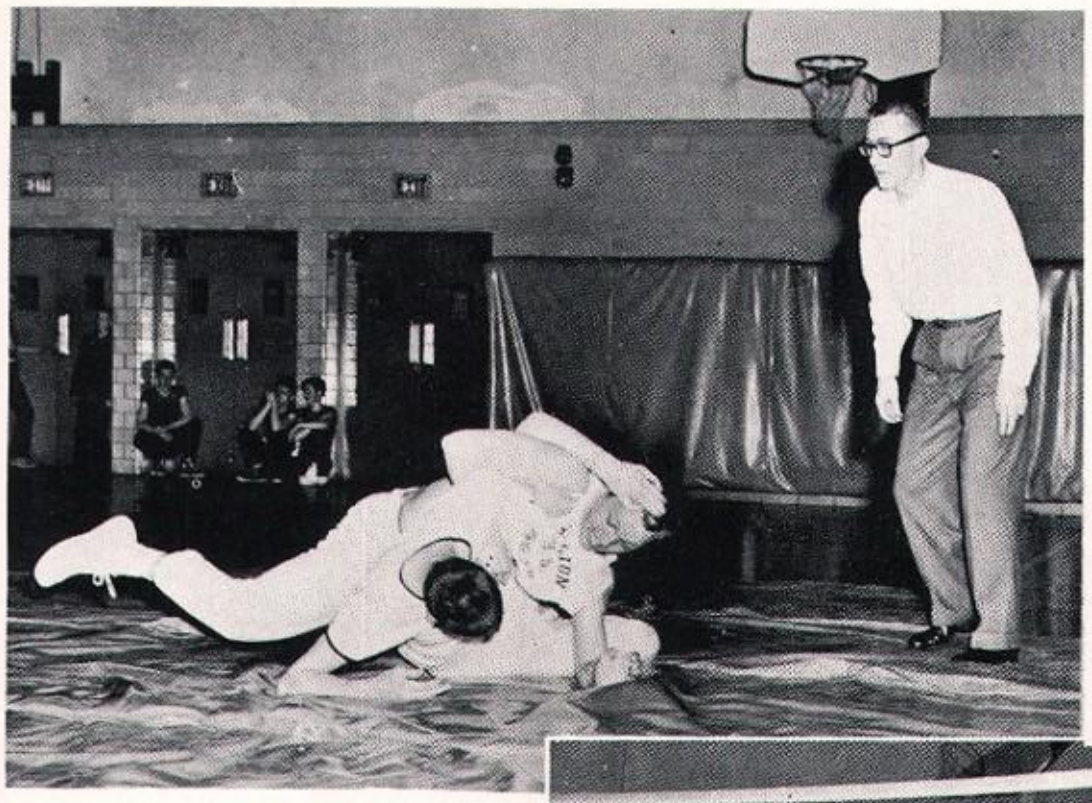
Oils, watercolors, pastels, and charcoals were hung in the cafeteria, the halls, and the art room. The ceramics, leather crafts and other handicrafts were arranged around the art room, all ready for inspection by the public. In conjunction with this, the home ec girls put on their fashion show, modeling the various types of attire they had completed during the year.



Mr. Fitzkee keeps a sharp eye on Ted Miller and Ken Shumaker as they give a wrestling exhibition at the Gym Review.

LaDawn Fix is really upside down as she performs a backflip for the spectators. Members of the Tumbling Clubs acted as spotters.

Gym review is an annual event at Red Lion Area High School that always goes over big. All the phases of the gymnastic program are shown. Exercise marching drills, games, and relays are presented by the boys gym classes. The girls try out their skill in several miscellaneous gymnastic activities, and those of the dancing club show their talent for tripping the light fantastic. All of these activities are carried out with agility and rhythm.

Since gym review wouldn't be complete without tumbling and the springboard, the tumbling clubs take an active part . . . first the fundamentals and then some advanced twists and jumps. Other highlights of the evening include a wrestling match, a graceful free exercise drill by the older girls and the trampoline. Red Lion has some skilled trampolists and the crowd is always thrilled as it watches.

This puckered-up trio—Larry R. Smith, Gilbert Smith, and Rodney Sechrist—tweetle out melodious songs whenever an opportunity presents itself.

Top musical performances are the result of long activity period singing sessions for the choruses, plus the endless practices of the instrumental groups. A swinging way to round out the year is the annual Night of Music, actually held for two nights, during which the audience is treated to the best of music in the school. Both junior and senior high groups participate in this spring program.

Other musical highlights of the year include state and district contests which give R. L. A. H. S. students a chance to use their talent with or against schools from all over the state, and invariably they do a very creditable job. In the '58 forensics, the baton twirlers, the brass sextet, flute trio, and brass quartet brought back ratings of "superior" and "excellent"; individual flute and piccolo entries also received a high rating. Then in January '59 Red Lion sent three ambassadors of music to the district band meeting at Pequea Valley and one representative to state band held at West York. Our musicians lead a very busy life!

A part of the Night of Music that appeals to both eye and ear, the Girls

Who's out of uniform? Just Mr. Ward, band director, who swaps his baton for a saxophone and takes his place with the dance band for the Night of Music performance. He is backed by Ted Gemmill, Larry E. Smith, Donald Detwiler, Robert Hess, Michael Kehr, Jerry Kauffman, Palmer Burke, and Carson Sechrist.

This musically-minded foursome—Larry Smith, Ted Gemmill, Charles Daugherty, and Palmer Burke—make up the band's brass quartet.

Ensemble presents several numbers. This popular singing group, directed by Mrs. Adams, makes several public appearances throughout the year.

Back of every successful school football team will be found the support of the students and morale boosters of one sort or another. Pep rallies, parades, bonfires, and decorations are all a part of this crusade to build up the team's fighting spirit. For years it has been the custom, on the eve of the game with West York, to hold a rally complete with parade, floats, and band, all winding up at the porch of the Community House at the Square for speeches, cheers, and float awards—this year, to juniors and freshmen. The Boosters entered the competition picture with their offer of a prize for the class doing the best job of decorating the field for home games . . . the juniors walked away with this prize.

involves work but can be lots of fun. Whether a rainy day or fair, a home game or one away, students and townspeople followed their team. As a finale, in November the Booster Club sponsored a dance and banquet to honor the team and coaches . . . a perfect way to end the season.

Perched precariously on the goal post, Barry Smeltzer helps out at the Saturday morning decorating session of the seniors at the football field on the day of the Elizabethtown game. A job like this brings out the Michelangelo in him.

Senior High coaches Maddox, Johnson, Shellenberger and Fitzkee have a delicious task before them . . . the event—the annual football banquet, held in the school cafeteria.

Seniors rally round the goal posts as they spend a busy Saturday morning decorating the football field. Their decorating assignment was for Homecoming Day.

These seniors are really brave! On the cold night of the West York Pep Parade they were out in full force (but not full attire) to bolster their class representation.

Mrs. Uhler gives some pointers and objectives to some future students who are investigating the room on Orientation Day.

Charles Sechrist portrays the old master of detectives himself, Sherlock Holmes, during the English segment of Orientation Day assembly.

Orientation Day is "get acquainted" day at R. L. A. H. S. for the eighth graders and out-of-town students who will be coming into Red Lion as freshmen the following year. The day's program is well planned in advance to give them a glimpse of the future

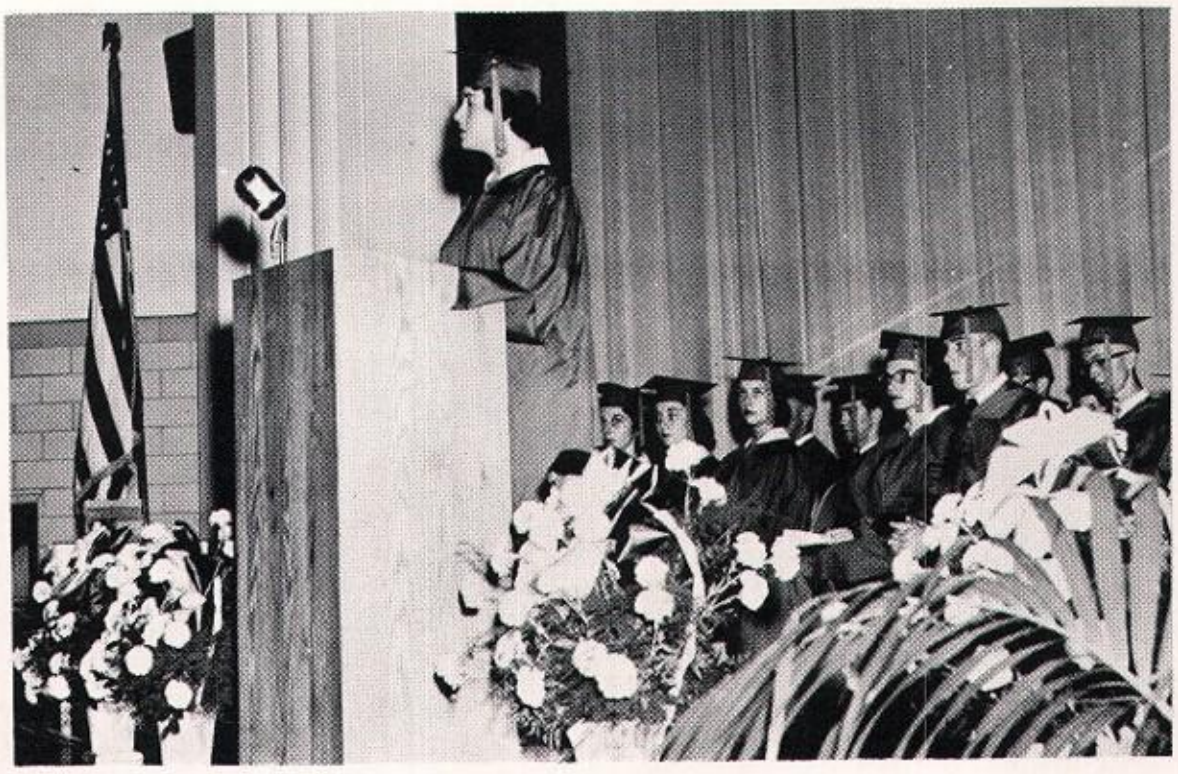
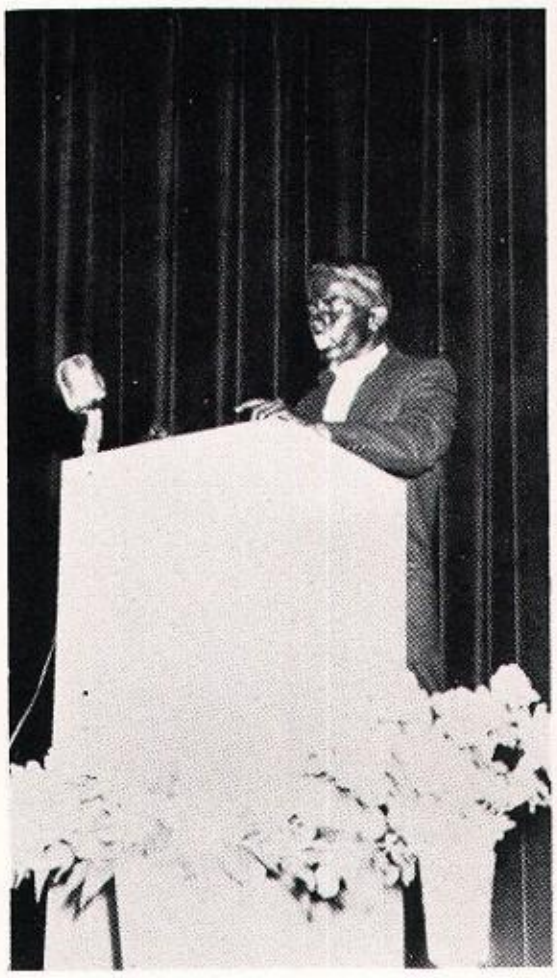
at R. L. A. H. S. Registration begins at the opening of school. Assembly is next with a program designed for their enjoyment and information. Then, divided into groups and escorted by members of the National Honor Society, they make a tour of the school, take time out for lunch, enjoy activities in the gym. Their day ends with instructions for selecting courses.

While the girls learn about home economics the boys gather around an engine, one of the exhibits in the agricultural workshop.

Helen Weir delivers her speech at the commencement exercises, backed up by sober-looking classmates.



"And man was created"—Harry Edie gives the story of the Creation, with a good response from the class day audience.



Four long years of waiting, working, and hoping finally came to an end with the arrival of June. The "coming out" of the seniors was made official with the usual graduation events. For their class day, the seniors put their special talents to work and presented some rollicking antics.

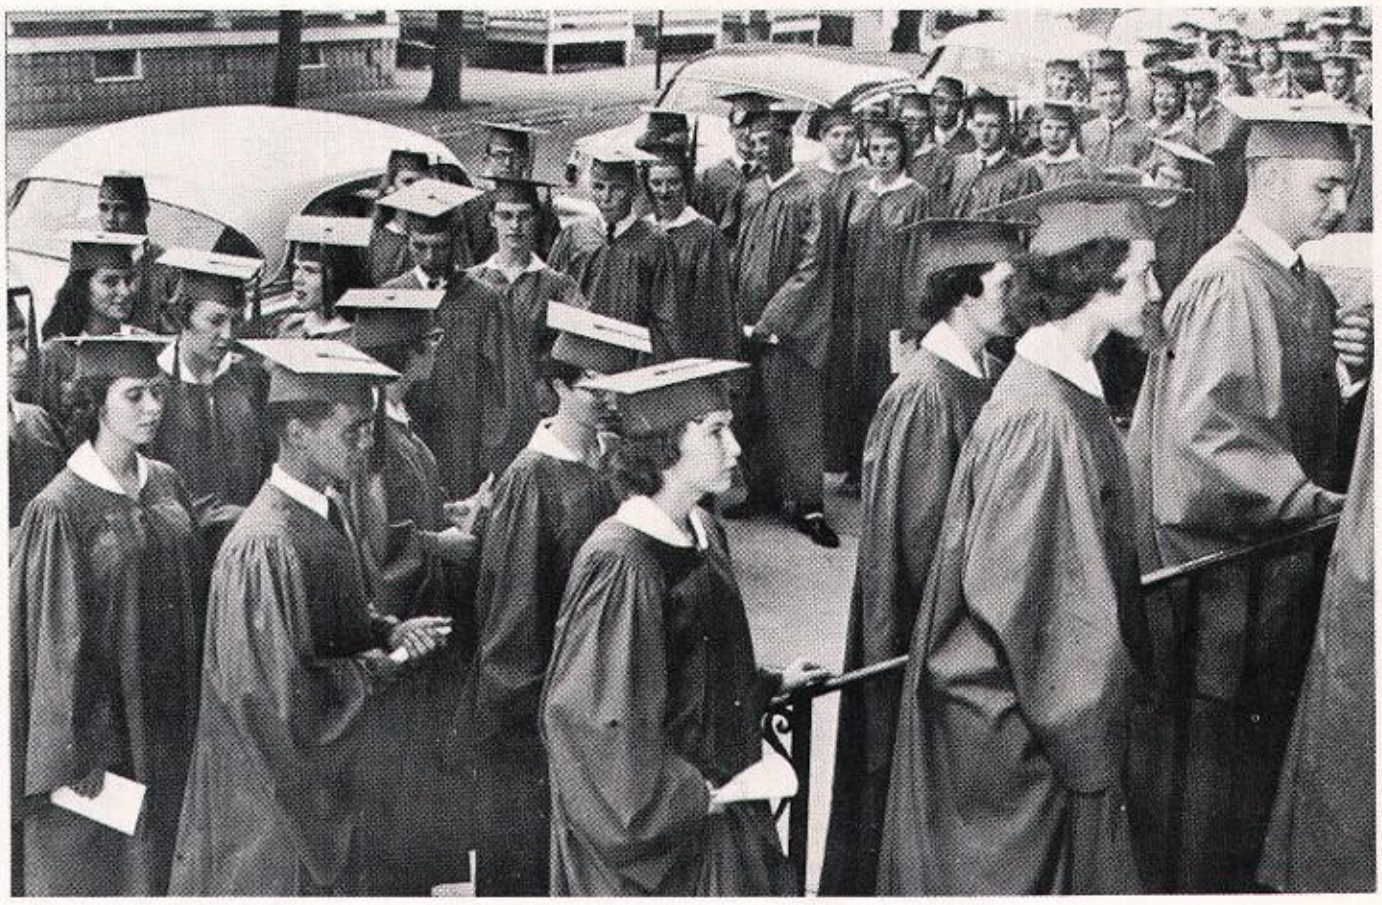
The final ceremonies began with the Sunday evening baccalaureate services. The seniors' march, the sermon, and finally the benediction . . . and they were one step closer to graduation. The auditorium was the scene for the next and last event, commencement. Again classmates of four years assembled, this time to hear their friends deliver orations and finally to receive their diplomas from Dr. Dellinger.



Waiting for the baccalaureate services, apprehensive seniors compose themselves before entering St. Paul's Church. This is the last step before commencement.

Career Conference night has become another annual activity at Red Lion . . . so also, it might seem, has the snow which for two years has caused postponement. When the school and the weather finally got together on February 23, there were thirty vocational fields represented—everything from agriculture to therapies—and sixteen colleges. Students from ninth to twelfth grades, together with their parents, took advantage of this information service.

The conference, sponsored by the guidance department, is designed to help students in planning their future.

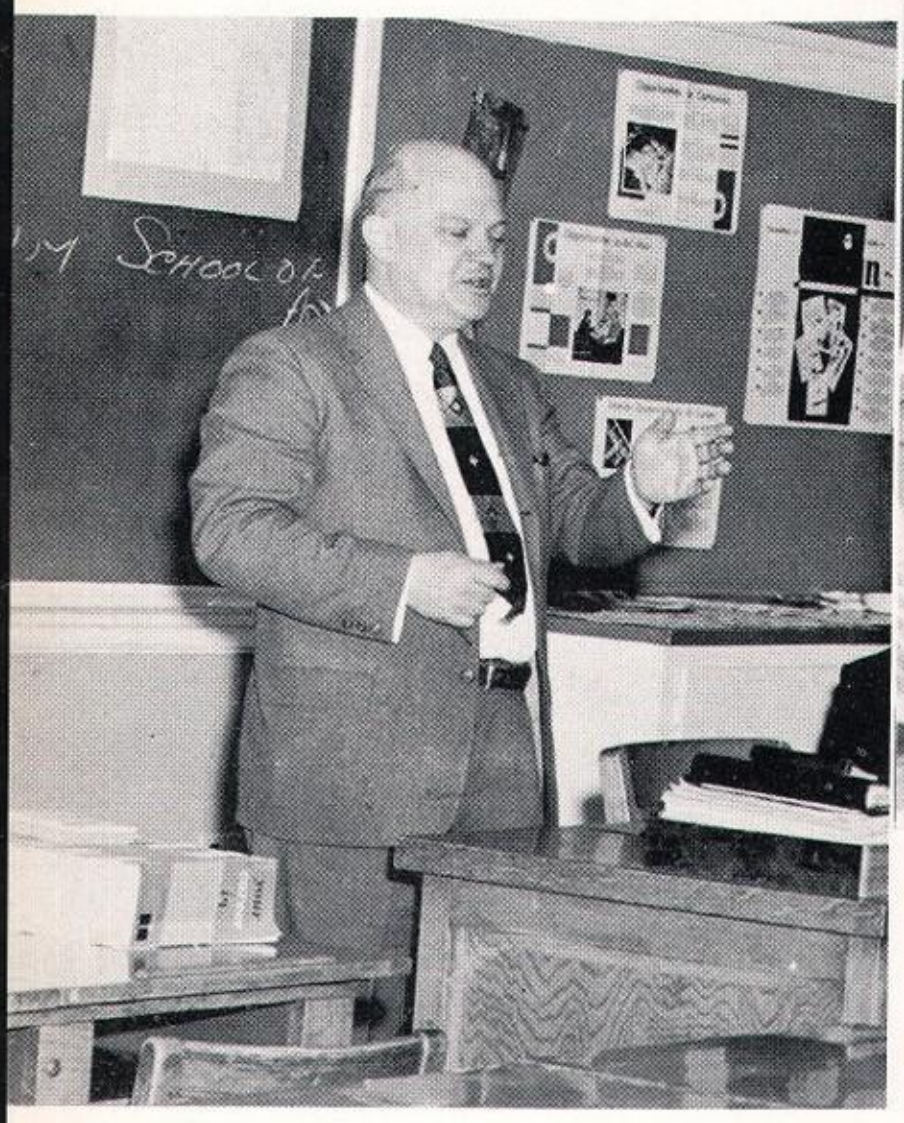
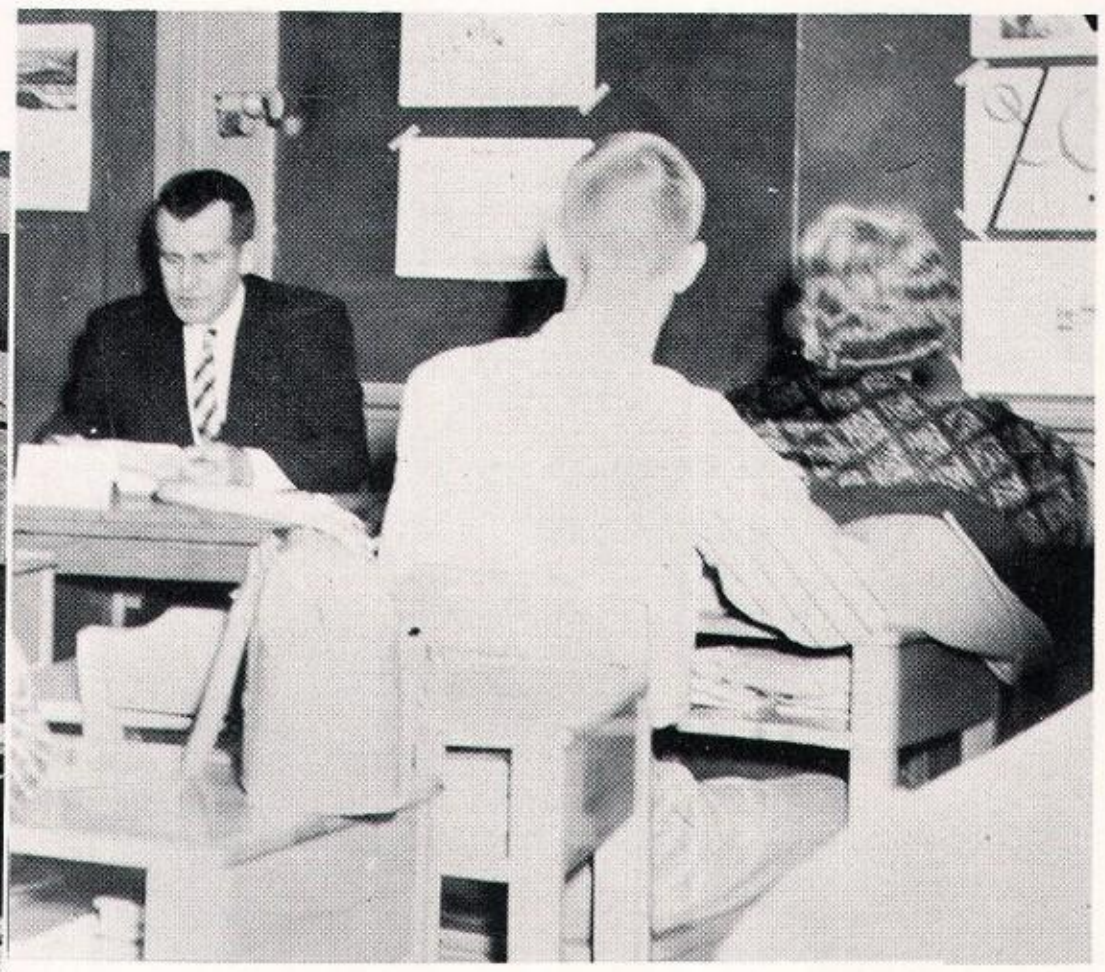
In the three thirty-minute sessions there is the opportunity to listen and ask questions ranging anywhere from the cost and the location of a school or college to qualifications and availability of jobs in various lines. In this manner the students are given an opportunity to shop around in fields which heretofore have been relatively unfamiliar to them.

Sgt. Pauline Peterson did her part at the Career Conference by representing a branch of the armed services, the WAC's.

"Say it with flowers," quotes Carl Schaefer, florist. Bill DeShong (foreground) must have listened attentively for he got a job at Schaefer's Flower House for the coming summer.





Another field that captured the interest of many students was art. E. Bruce Thomas briefs his groups on this interesting subject.

For their class play, scheduled for March 20 and 21, the juniors chose something that might really be called out of this world—the "Queen from Mars," a combination comedy and mystery. The cast features thirteen characters, including two robots. "Unusual" is a perfect way to describe the play and its characters who range from a world-famous scientist, Dr. Breese, who believes in the equality of mankind, to Nomar who looks very much like Satan, and walks with a cat-like grace. The play, an amateur theatrical,

takes place in the scientist's mountain-top home where some pretty peculiar things occur, such as chairs moving while no one is near them, and the house shaking for no reason at all. Eerie, weird, fantastic, whatever it may be called, "Queen from Mars" is quite different. After such experiences, Mr. Baldwin and his junior Flash Gordons may find normal living a bit quiet, but definitely more comfortable.

Nina Beth Landis, Nelah the wise, and Carolyn Flinchbaugh, Princess Tahnee, rehearse their parts with Dale Uhler who plays Professor Breese.

The football heroine, Ginger, Elda Wilhelm, poses for the picture to appear on the front of "Life" magazine.

A sparkling comedy with a slightly different slant was the selection for this year's senior play.

Accomplished senior actors under Mr. Richard Baldwin's direction starred in this story of a football player who oddly enough was a girl. Ginger, a sophomore in school, just loved to play football, but she had trouble convincing her parents, friends, and the faculty members to let her try out for the squad. After much propaganda production, she finally made it. Her sisters were angry at her because she made them the laughing stock of the school (or so they thought). She fought with her boyfriend, embarrassed her sister's boyfriend who was the captain of the team, and caused a sensation by having her picture and story published in "Life" magazine. Add a loyal maid, an unusual banker, an irate principal, and a few boyfriends to complicate things and a good senior play is the result.

Jeannie Carroll, Susan Smith, taps her foot impatiently as her parents and their maid Liz, Sylvia Herbst, get ready to accompany her to a play in which she is starring.

Mr. Carroll, Marvin Deardorff, is either in a trance or isn't paying any attention to the tongue-lashing he's receiving from Mr. Hoffman, Barry Stell.

With amaze in her eyes, Mrs. Carroll, Jean Ann Eberly, stares at her raccoon-coat clad husband who is relating Ginger's football tactics.

Dancing beneath the chandeliers, couples enjoy the dreamy music of the Columbians at the prom. The setting was in keeping with "Some Enchanted Evening."

Refreshment time at the Satellite Swing . . . Linda Burns seems to be enjoying herself immensely.

The school social activities of '58 drew to a close with two big dances—an informal and an ultra formal. "Satellite Swing," the student council dance, was an informal held April 18 to the music emitted by a jukebox. Highlighting the entertainment was a hilarious Jello commercial by Kenneth Shumaker and Nancy Coeyman's pantomime of Dinner with Drac. Cokes, potato chips, and hoagies were the treat of the evening.

The biggest and most beautiful dance held was the junior-senior prom on May 29. The theme of decoration being "Some Enchanted Evening," the gym was turned into a medieval castle, complete with wooden drawbridge and real water fountain. Over two hundred people danced to the music of the Columbians. Amid the soft music and low lights

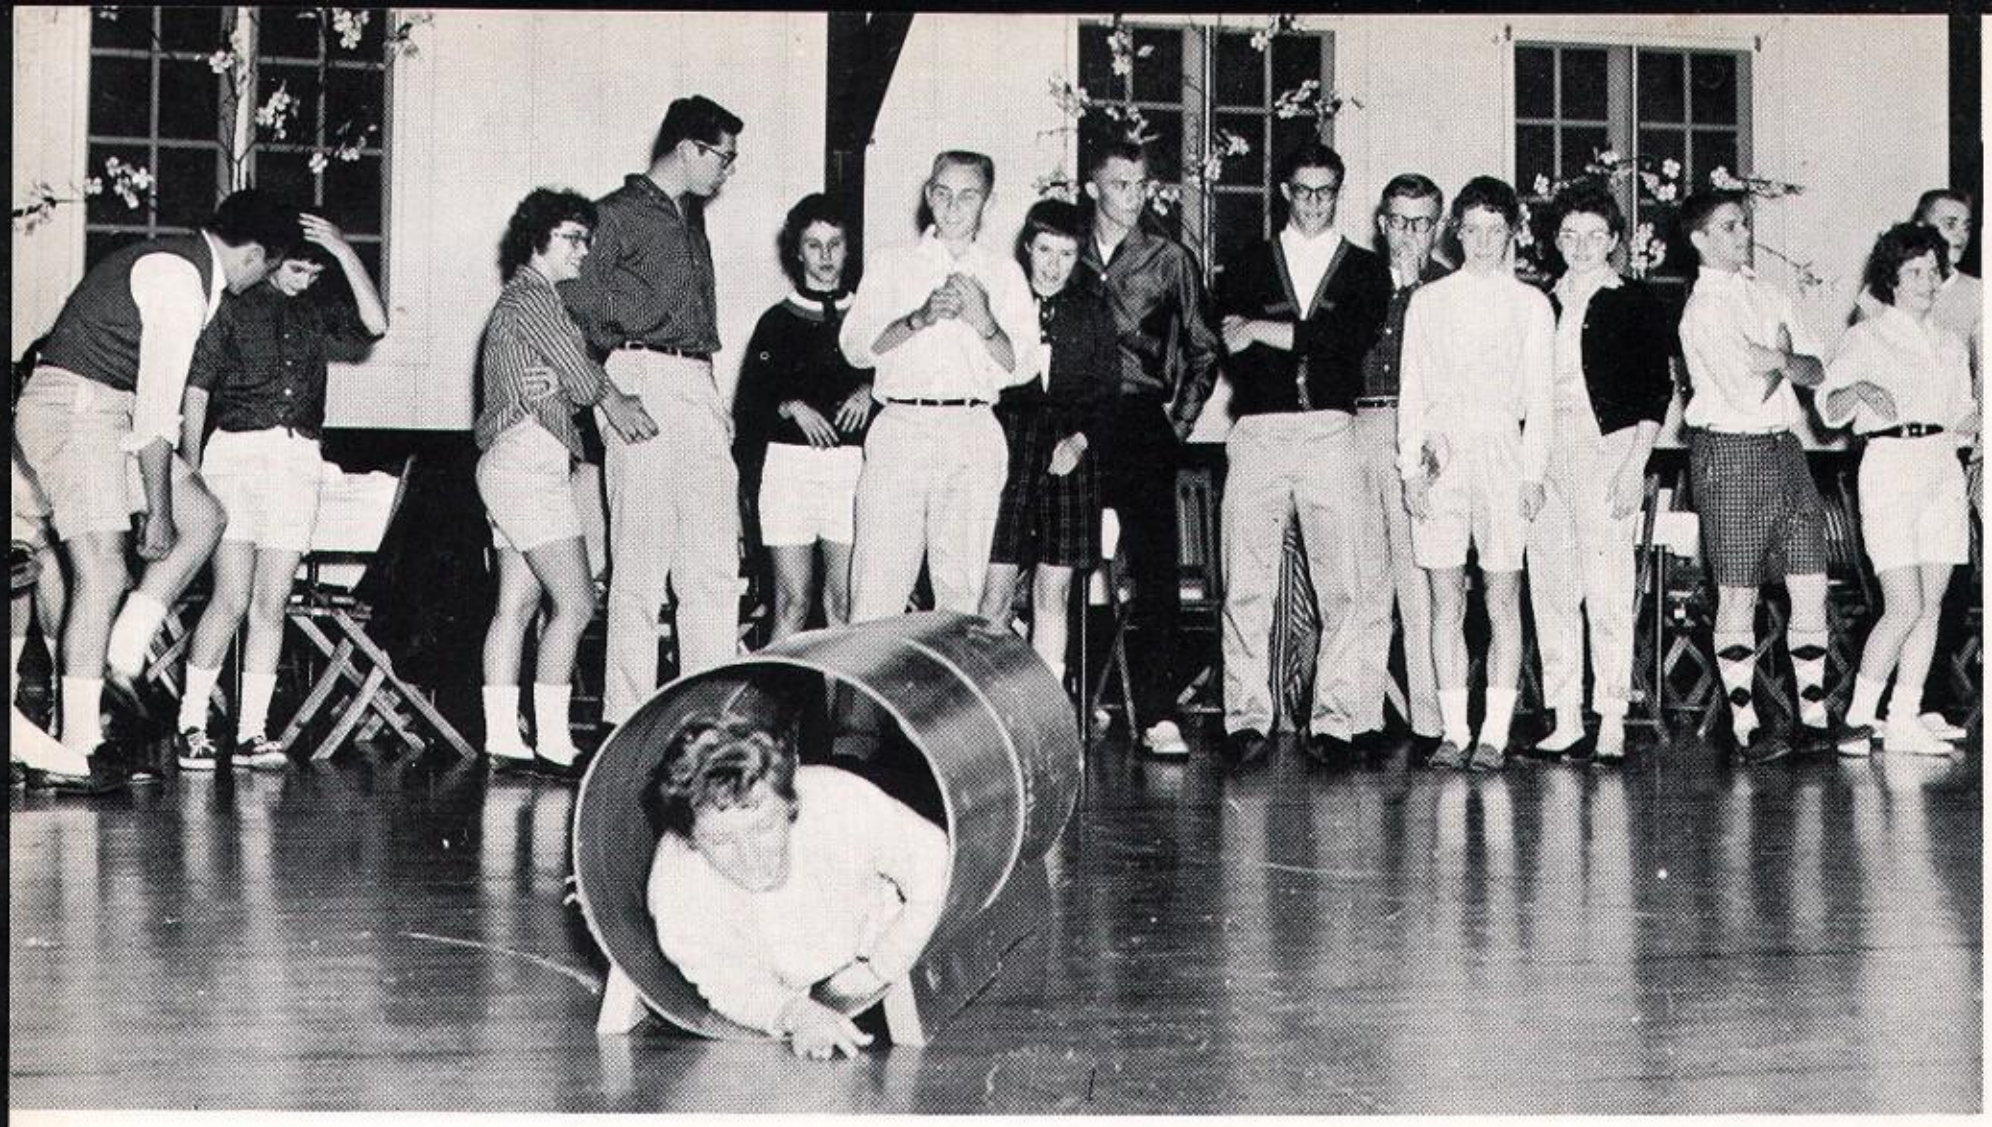
cookies were nibbled and punch was sipped. After the prom, the Red Lion Lions Club sponsored an all-night party at the Red Lion Country Club, with dancing, music, and games, with putting, swimming, and bowling for the more active—all to keep those heavy eyelids open until time for breakfast.

The annual football dance had more than one surprise in store for the team members. Barry Smeltzer, Armand Conway, and Jeff Smith seem pleased with the trophies they received from President of G.A.A. La Dawn Fix and Vice-president Loretta Holtzapple.

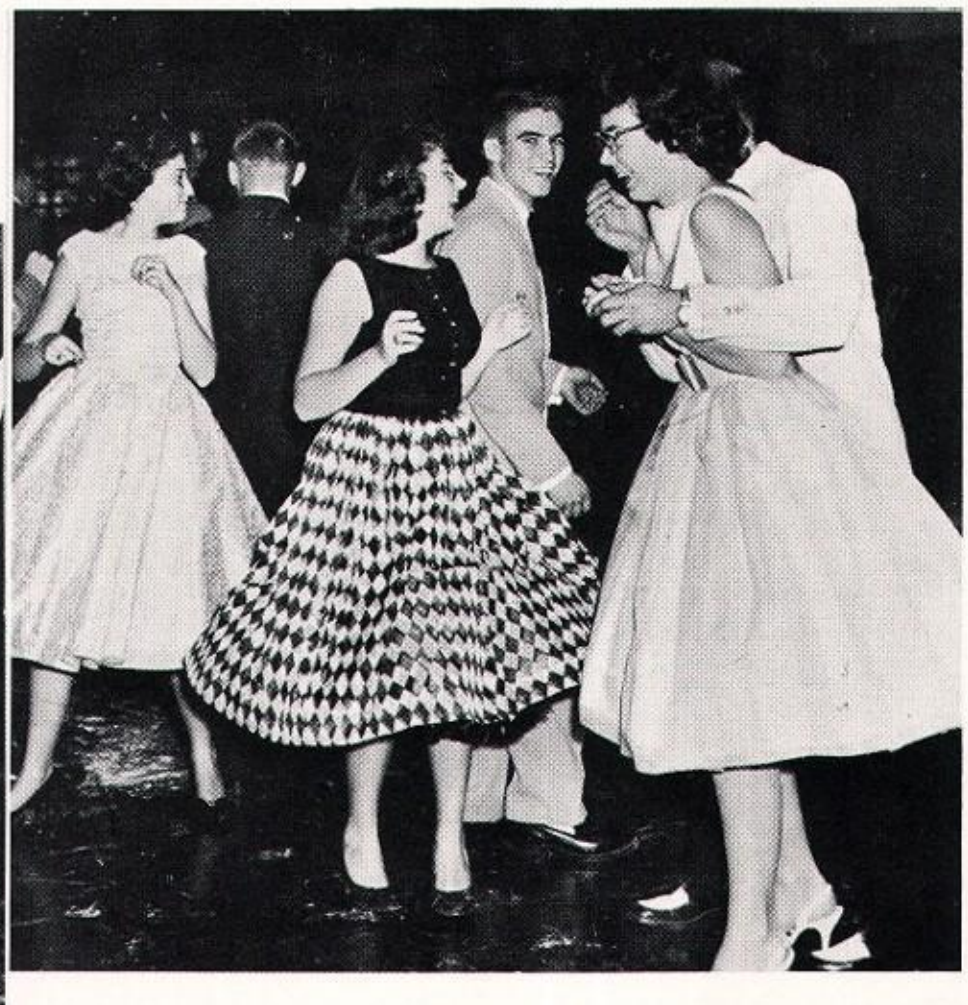
Ninth graders had a grand time getting to know each other at their early fall dance. An affair like this can be the beginning of real class cooperation.

Chaperons and senior high students alike spent an enjoyable evening during the Yuletide season at the senior-sponsored dance "White Christmas."



Judy Wolf seems to be having a barrel of fun at the all-night party at the Country Club after the prom. The party, a whooping success, was sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

These dancers have caught the Yuletide spirit and are having a ball at the senior-sponsored Christmas dance.

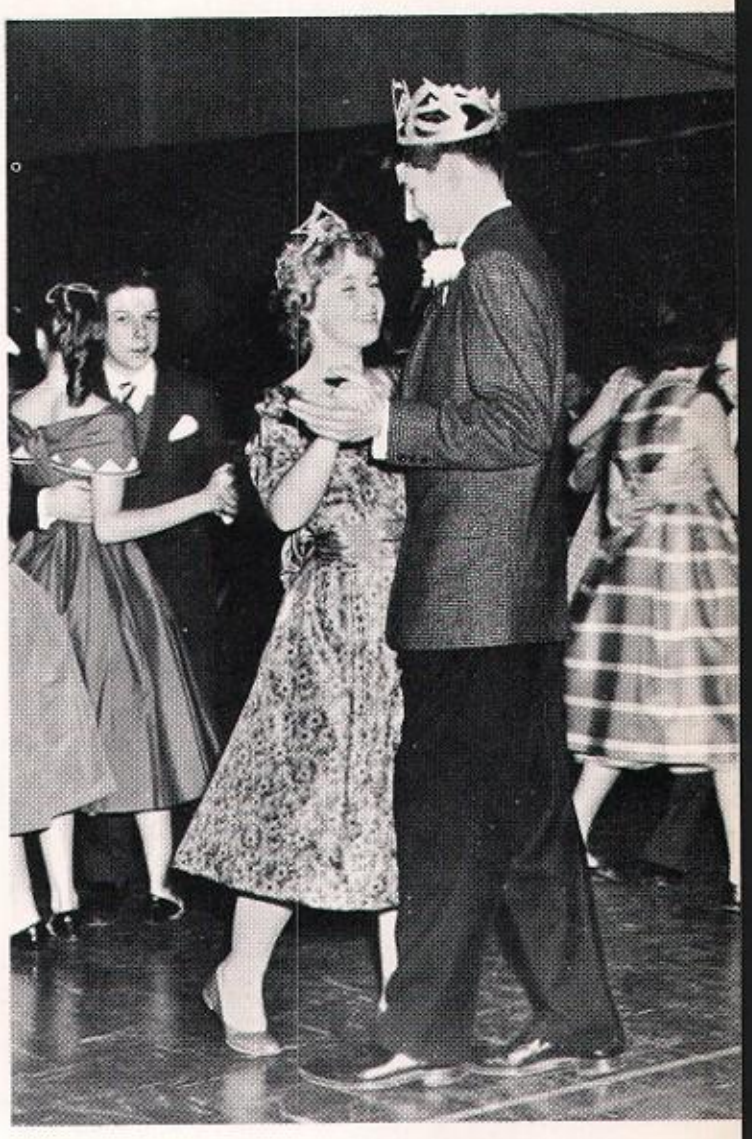


A crap game? Even though it looks that way, it's only the guys trying to find their partners' shoes at the Christmas Dance.

Senior high royalty . . . the King and Queen of Hearts, Barry Smeltzer and Betty Bosley, with their little cupids, Sue Ann Noonan and Jack Grove, reign over the senior high valentine dance, "Beaus and Belles."

"Heart's Holiday" was the theme of this year's junior high valentine dance, which as always had a large turnout of enthusiastic junior highers.

Leading off the dance, the Prince and Princess of Hearts, Charles Horn and Nan Sheffer, become royalty for one night.



Red Lion's social life includes dances for all tastes. The freshmen started the year with a bang with a get-acquainted party in October. Weeks later the G.A.A. sponsored a dance at the end of the football season to honor the football players for their grand gridiron performances. The many colored gym decorations were in accordance with the central idea "Confetti Caper."

The winter season brought on "White Christmas," the senior class's senior high Christmas dance, complete with tree and snow; the school dance band turned out to supply part of the music. Then in January came the junior high record hop, emceed by Bob Shipley, disc jockey from WSBA.

With rhythmic steps

the senior high students danced to "Beaus and Belles," the valentine dance sponsored by the juniors. The main attraction of this affair was the crowning of the King and Queen of Hearts. Almost parallel was the valentine dance of the ninth grade, held for junior high. Their theme was "Heart's Holiday," with two ninth graders being crowned Prince and Princess of Hearts.

SENIORS

Of all the people and activities that make up Red Lion High the group that will remain longest in our memories will be members of our own senior class. As seniors we're the ones who have survived the activities described in the front part of the book. The teachers unanimously have said that real work doesn't begin until after graduation, and, taking their advice to heart, we've worked from uncertain freshman days to the last senior six-week period. Our job now is to see if a senior, so trained and so educated, can last very long in the outside world. We have certainly enjoyed these last four years. But it is now that we are about to leave that we really begin to appreciate school, and especially our classmates, whom WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

Graduation time 1959, will be long remembered by these seniors . . . Linda Gehr, Sylvia Herbst, Nancy Newcomer, Larry E. Smith, and David Gable try on their recently received caps and gowns.

High school years can be exciting years . . . and so they have been for the members of the Class of '59. The first few weeks as freshmen they spent in familiarizing themselves with the classrooms and a whole sea of new faces. Then they hopped right into the routine of clubs, noon-time sports, and social affairs. Tenth and eleventh grades slipped away quickly, highlighted by G. A. A., the junior play, and the prom. Some were acknowledged as full-fledged Hilltop writers, some made varsity teams, while others got assignments on the Lion staff. When finally the '58 class day rolled around, they moved out of underclassman status. In their happy state they were silly seniors at first, taking everything with a grin. Their outlook was for lots of fun and lots of time to have it.

When this gay group of a hundred and seventy seniors scampered over the threshold of their alma mater in September they began a year which in their school memories will remain as rather hectic. Selling yearbooks, rushing to York for pictures, selecting announcements . . . all are vivid recollections of those last months of high school education . . . even the office calls for signing names to appear on the diplomas. With it all, the seniors seem pseudo-sophisticated now,

as they obligingly grant autographs to admiring underclassmen and distribute name cards and pictures. With dignity befitting one about to graduate they attend the prom, then do an about face for the party at the country club later. The whole way through, they are the seniors—leaders of school activities.

Class colors are chosen—rust and white; also the flower—chrysanthemum, and the class motto—"Find a way or make one." After months of concentrating on studies, suddenly the realization that graduation is near at hand. The hilarious class day mood turns serious with the singing of the "Alma Mater"; and a set of sober seniors

lines up for baccalaureate, soon to be stored in memory with its twin, commencement.

As for the days ahead, some seniors look forward to a happy married life; others plan to enter a branch of Uncle Sam's forces; a large percentage will head for college, hospital training or business school, while a few are hopping straight into trades of their own. Whatever the future holds, with it will be thoughts of happy days at Red Lion.

PATRONS

The town of Red Lion is blessed with a group of grown-ups who really take an interest in the school. The results of this adult interest are felt in the quality of our sports, our plays, programs and our school publications. To those who are patrons of this, our yearbook, the staff and class of '59 are extremely grateful. The listing of their names on the following pages will serve as a lasting reminder of the friends, relatives, and business firms whose support WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.

Puffing and panting, the Boy Scouts of Red Lion and surrounding areas hustle these big balloons along during the Red Lion Christmas Parade.

Mrs. Elesta Foust, former R.L.A.H.S. teacher, gave her audience some thoughts-to-ponder in her talk to the students during Student Council's pre-election assembly.

One of the big jobs facing the seniors was their yearbook sales drive. To plug the '59 Lion the members of the class put their heads together and came up with a yearbook assembly in the idea of a class

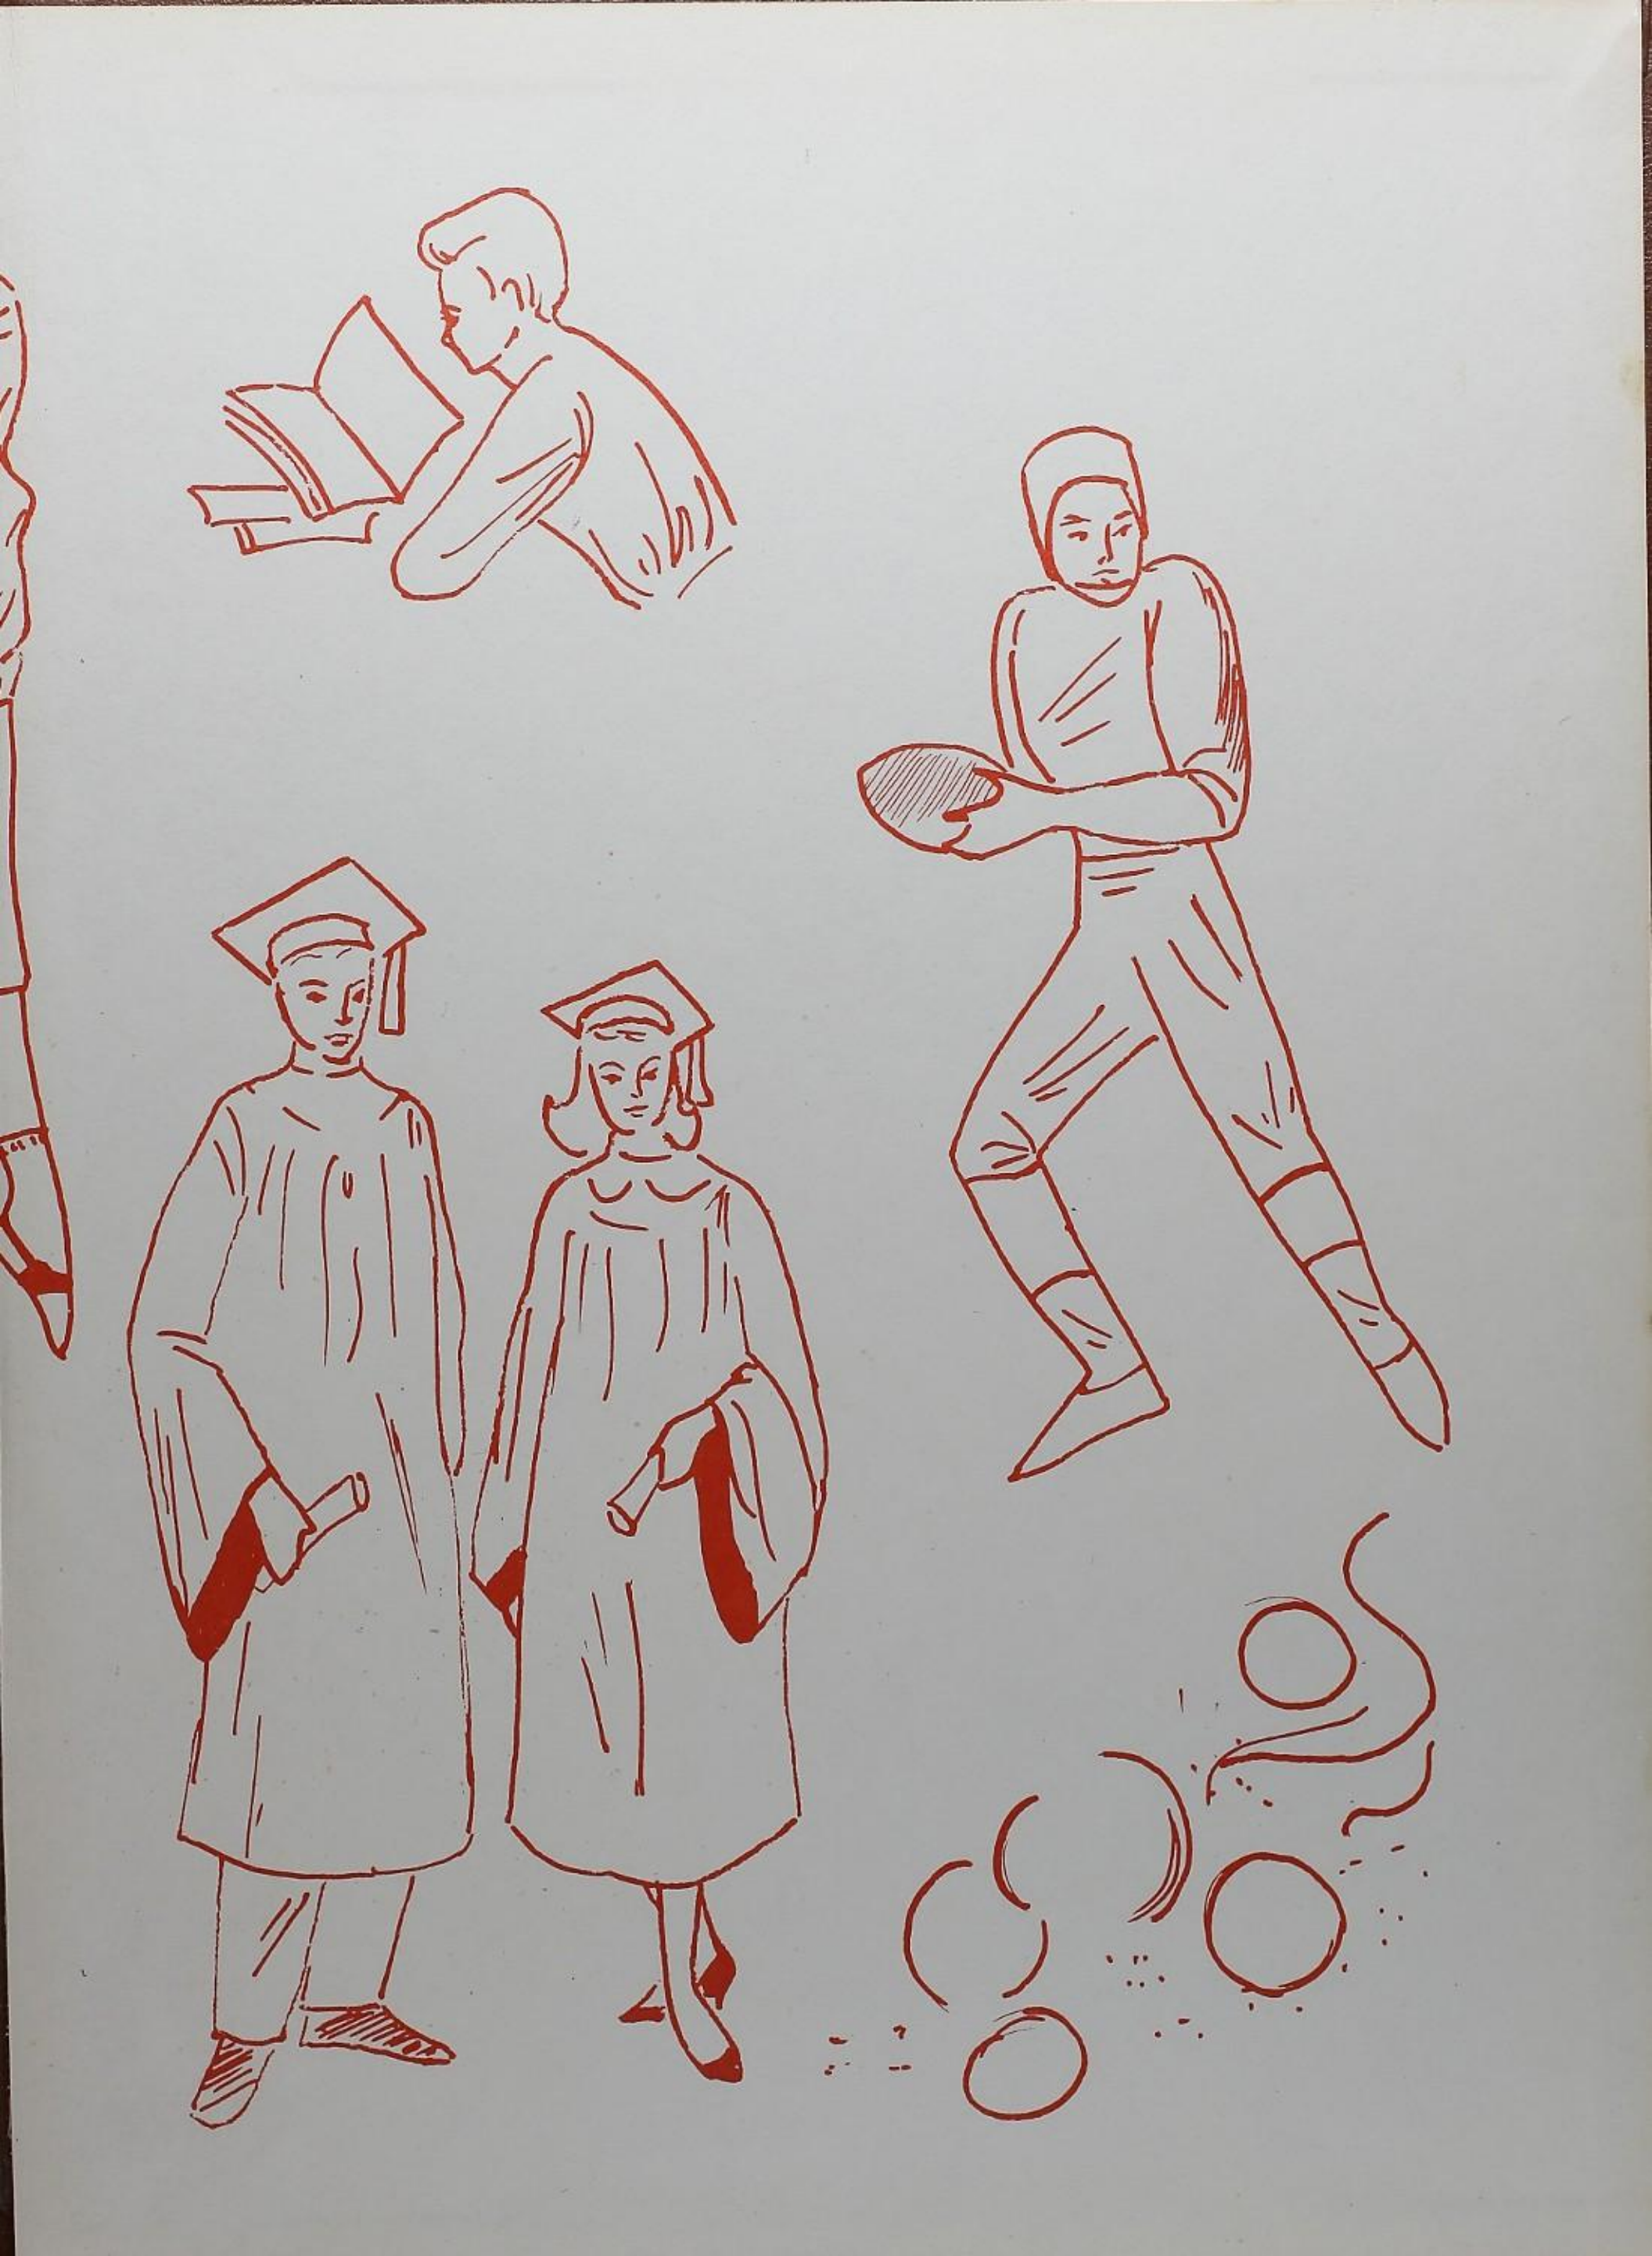
FINIS

After four long and happy years, the class of '59 goes out of the picture. This book is the story of our last year here at Red Lion—our work, our fun, our accomplishments. It shows experiences that will soon become happy memories—the daily classwork, the hot air sessions, the companionship, and the off-beat and extracurricular items.


We've presented the teachers, the curriculum, the underclassmen, the activities, the sports, and the events . . . these make Red Lion High, the alma mater that WE'LL REMEMBER ALWAYS.
